Transit Fare Goes to 15c With $2 Pass On July 16

D. C. Public Utilities Commission Rules On CTC Requests; 3 Tokens to Cost 40c

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday ordered Capital Transit Co. fares increased to 15 cents cash, three tokens for 40 cents and $2 for a weekly pass.

The new fare schedule will take effect at 5 a. m. July 16, the PUC announced, and will apply only in the District.

Present fares are 13 cents cash, or three tokens for 35 cents and $1.75 for a weekly pass. The company asked an increase to 15 cents cash, or six tokens for 80 cents, and elimination of the pass.

In its decision, the PUC estimated the new fares should provide an annual take of $1,771,000, or a 6.4 percent return on a District rate base valuation of 27.5 million dollars. This, the PUC said, should be sufficient return to "preserve the financial integrity of the company."

Ratio Is Maintained

So far as the streetcar or bus rider is concerned, the decision means he must pay more money, but price relationship between pass, token and cash fares is maintained.

He can still save two cents a ride by purchasing tokens. The price of the pass will remain equivalent to 15 token rides.

Capital Transit was "disappointed" that it did not get all it asked, said Vice President E. C. Giddings, but added: "We will do all we can to give good and efficient service under the fares as ordered."

Vernon V. Baker, who recently was successful in his District Court suit to throw out the gas company rate increase, said he was "not satisfied" with the new rates. He refused further comment until he had read the decision. Baker is chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations. The federa-

Second Canadian Mass of Cold Air Pointed This Way

Yesterday was one day you could make comparisons about without being the least bit odious.

The temperature just hit 80 degrees—at 4:25 p. m., and The Man said we can expect more livable weather at least through Friday.

Yesterday's good-tempered temperatures came to us courtesy Canada, which sent air to get rid of the Gulf stuff. Washingtonians had been sweltering under. Canada is now preparing another mass of cold air, due in Friday just when the mass we've got now will have lost its first fresh fragrance.

The Man still isn't prepared to tell us what we'll get over the long July 4th weekend. Today will be slightly warmer, with high near 82, and some chance of showers. Low will be about 62. The low yesterday was 61 at 6:10 a. m.

Montgomery Teacher Fired On Red Issue

W. W. Hinckley Called Red Before House Un-American Committee

William W. Hinckley, Montgomery Blair High School teacher, has been identified by Elizabeth T. Bentley as a one-time card-carrying Communist and has been fired summarily from his job.

Miss Bentley's identification of the 40-year-old Montgomery County teacher came in testimony before the House Un-American Activities Committee. The transcript was released yesterday.

The committee also released Hinckley's testimony in which he refused to say whether he is or was a Communist. He told the committee that . . . "my answer might tend to incriminate me."

Hinckley also refused to answer whether he knew Miss Bentley, self-styled "Spy Queen" and Communist courier.

Miss Bentley, however, said she signed "Bill Hinckley's party card, and he immediately went underground."

Set About 1935

Her testimony sets the date of Hinckley's alleged Communist membership about 1935.

But Miss Bentley told the Un-American Activities group she did not know whether Hinckley or his wife, Margaret, who also testified before the committee, are Communists at present.

O. Bowie Duckett, special assistant Attorney General of Maryland, said he is studying Hinckley's testimony to determine the possibility of prosecuting him for perjury under Maryland's Ober Law.

Hinckley told the House committee he signed the loyalty oath required under the Ober Law for State, county, or municipal employes in Maryland.

Frank S. Tavenner, jr., counsel for the House committee, said the committee has not yet considered whether it would cite Hinckley for contempt of Congress.

Committee Counsel Tavenner said Hinckley was called before the committees in its attempt to learn more about William W. Rem-

Truman Says U. S. Acted For Peace

President Calls Situation Serious In Addressing Reserve Officers

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

President Truman, responding to a rousing ovation for his "dynamic action" in the Korean crisis, yesterday said simply that "we face a serious situation."

"We hope we face it in the cause of peace," he told the national convention of the Reserve Officers Association.

The Chief Executive added that he was "always hoping that we will arrive at the peace in the world for which we created the United Nations."

The remarks came after the thousand persons in the Mayflower Ballroom stood and applauded for several minutes a resolution by John P. Bracken, ROA president, indorsing the Korean action.

The President, sporting a matching polka dot bow tie and handkerchief, waved for quiet and then added the somber note to his previous brief, extemporaneous talk.

In this, the President declared that he considered emphasis on the rights of individuals "the most important thing in the Constitution" and declared it was his intention to "implement that theory not only in the United States, but in the world at large."

The President was preceded by Secretary of Defense Louis H. Jonhson, who recalled the Sunday-night decision at the White House to send planes and warships to the aid of the Korean Republic.

He described this as "the finest hour in American history to date."

Johnson, ad-libbing his prepared address, quoted Arthur Krock in the New York Times as saying the President was determined from the outset to adopt the forceful policy which was announced.

He then quoted from yesterday morning's editorial in The Washington Post:

"These are days calling for steady nerves, for a strict eye on the ball, and for a renewed resolve to keep our purposes pure in the grapple we have undertaken with men who would plunge the world into darkness. The occasion has found the man in Harry Truman."

Johnson declared "national defense is stronger today than ever before in our peacetime history."

"We are spending more. We are getting more than ever before. Next year we will get even more by way of preparedness out of every dollar appropriated than we are getting now," he said.

Bracken, a Washington attorney, praised the Administration's Korean orders, comparing the President with Andrew Jackson.

He said that in the Jackson Administration the Russians took two American vessels and despite a lengthy exchange of correspondence between the two governments, refused to return them. Jackson was advised to send another, stronger letter.

He did, Bracken said. It read, "Send back them ships."

And the ships came back.

Moscow Asserts Chinese Had No Right to Vote On Asian Action

London, June 28 (AP).—Russia today declared that the United Nations Security Council resolution calling on U. N. members to help South Korea has no legal force.

The Soviet news agency Tass made public the Soviet reply to the resolution. The reply was broadcast by the Moscow radio.

Russia said the Nationalist Chinese delegate who cast the seventh vote in favor of the resolution had "no lawful right" to take part in the proceedings. The resolution was offered by the United States.

Seven affirmative votes are required to pass a resolution in the Security Council.

Insist on Unanimity

The Russians also maintained that the U. N. charter specifies that all five permanent members of the Council—the United States, Britain, France, Russia and China—must vote in favor of a resolution to make it legal.

The Security Council voted 7-1 Tuesday night at Lake Success to ask all member nations to apply military sanctions against the North Koreans.

The Soviet Union boycotted the meeting as she has all U. N. meetings since the first of the year, because of the presence of Chinese Nationalist representatives.

Those voting for the United States-sponsored resolution were the United States, Britain, France, China, Cuba, Norway, and Ecuador.

Pravda Charges U. S. Has Begun Aggression

Moscow, June 28 (AP).—Pravda, the Communist Party paper, charged today that the United States "has undertaken a direct act of aggression" against Northern Korea and Communist China.

In a front-page editorial, it declared President Truman's order yesterday sending ships and planes to help Western-recognized Southern Korea and to Formosa was "evidence that the American ruling circles no longer confine themselves to the preparations for aggression, but have gone over to direct acts of aggression."

Then it inquired:

"Have they not, however, gone too far?"

It gave no answer to the question.

In another version, as translated by the Soviet monitor in London, the question was worded: "But have they gone too far?"

The United States Embassy announced that a note from Washington asking the Soviet Union to use its influence to bring about the withdrawal of the invading Communist forces from South Korea was delivered yesterday afternoon. No reaction to the note was made public.

Pravda's editorial was the first public Russian comment on the new United States policy in the Pacific strife. President Truman's statement was reported in routine

Senate Extends 1-Year Draft By 76-0 Vote

Johnson Says Early Use of Authority Not Now Expected

Congress yesterday gave President Truman power to expand the armed forces to more than two million men during the next year by inducting men of draft age and calling National Guardsmen and Reservists.

By a unanimous vote—76 to 0—the Senate approved a one-year, unrestricted extension of the present draft law and new authority to mobilize the Guard and Reserves. The bill now goes to the White House, having passed the House Tuesday by a 315-to-5 vote.

Shortly after this impressive determination to be ready for any emergency, Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson issued a statement declaring there is no present intention either to reinstitute the draft or to call up the reserve components.

Flooded With Inquiries

To answer floods of inquiries from those concerned, Johnson last night declared:

"It is not contemplated to call the Reserve components to active duty in the forseeable future. Neither does the Defense Department plan to ask for application of the Selective Service law so long as its authorized strength can

General Travels Toward Seoul Through Storms In Unarmed Ship

Tokyo (Thursday), June 29 (AP).—General MacArthur arrived in South Korea today in a flight in an unarmed transport plane to the war front.

By Earnest Hoberecht
United Press Staff Writer

With General MacArthur En Route to Korea (Thursday), June 29 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur took off for the Korean war front today in his airplane "Bataan."

MacArthur, with the "high brass" of his supreme headquarters staff, is flying "to Seoul or that neighborhood."

The man who drove the Japanese from New Guinea through the Philippines took off on this new crusade, from the Haneda airport in Tokyo at 6:10 a. m. (4:10 a. m., EDT, Wednesday).

Told Not to Go

MacArthur took off in soupy weather. Meteorologists warned him not to. His advisers urged him to await clearing weather. MacArthur stuck out his chin and said:

"We go."

His plane is not armed. He is headed for "the neighborhood of Seoul to see for himself." He plans to be gone at least two days.

MacArthur has long been an advocate of taking a strong stand against Communism in Asia as he was 10 years ago against imperialism in Japan.

MacArthur believes there is nothing more important in the world than halting Communist aggression.

We are now flying toward the war zone where Russian-built yak fighter planes, flown by North Korean Communists, have attacked American planes.

Everybody Tense

As we boarded the plane this morning it was just like the days of World War II when many of us were flying with the American forces against the Japanese.

We were all a little tense, and MacArthur must have been reminded of those days, too.

The Korean situation may look dark today. But it must be remembered that this is not as difficult a situation as that MacArthur faced at the beginning of World War II.

There is no doubt in the mind of anybody with him that he intends to see South Korea through to victory.

According to his plans, he intends to be in Korea only two days—on this trip.

60 Die, 93 Injured At Fete for Duke

Damascus, Syria, June 28 (AP).—A large crowd gathered near a fuel depot at Homs, 100 miles from here, yesterday to cheer the Duke of Edinburgh.

The duke, husband of Princess Elizabeth, is on a tour of the Middle East.

Shortly after he passed, fire broke out in the depot's warehouse. The crowd rushed in to help put it out.

Gelignite, stored in the warehouse, exploded.

The crowd was trapped. At least 60 died and 93 suffered serious injuries.

Ground Forces May Be Sent Into Korea

Tokyo (Thursday), June 28 (AP). Some American combat troops have been alerted for action in South Korea "at a moment's notice," an authoritative source said today.

The source declared the deteriorating military situation in the Communist-invaded half of the country may force the United States to commit ground soldiers to the battle.

It was added that a decision on whether they would be sent into action might be made today.

It is known that top-level American authorities believe such a move cannot be delayed much longer if the Reds are to be kept from overrunning the peninsula.

Latest reports said northern troops were threatening Suwon airfield, which American airmen are using. But it was still in southern hands this morning. United States planes have been using the field only long enough to refuel, rearm and take off again.

Truck convoys at Suwon were strafed heavily by northern fighter planes yesterday, one witness who returned to Japan today reported.

The North Koreans announced plans to move their capital to Seoul. A broadcast by the Pyongyang radio said the constitution of the Red regime names Seoul as the "capital of unified Korea." It designated Pyongyang as the provisional capital until the North and South were unified.

British Offer Warships to Support U. S.

Forces Would Double Allied Sea, Air Power In Far East Waters

London, June 28 (AP).—Britain placed her Far Eastern naval forces at the disposition of the United States today to bolster American air and sea power in Korea.

Britain has 22 or 23 vessels within reach of Korea, including an aircraft carrier with 40 fighter planes, and an unspecified number of land-based navy planes. That makes British naval strength in the Korean area approximately equal to American naval strength there. President Truman ordered American sea and air forces yesterday to support South Korea against the invaders from the North.

Prime Minister Attlee informed a cheering House of Commons late this afternoon that orders already have gone out to the British naval commander at Singapore to fulfill the government's decision. Winston Churchill, the opposition leader, concurred:

"I need scarcely say that the Prime Minister speaks for all parties in the House when he makes this announcement. We shall do our best to give him any support he needs in what seems to be an inescapable duty."

The British action came less than 24 hours after the United Nations Security Council asked all U.N. member states to furnish such aid as possible to help Southern Korea repel the Communist invaders from the North.

Asked how British Commonwealth countries were chipping in to help, Attlee replied:

"We have our responsibilities

Enemy Stalled In Han River Battle After Bridges Go Down

BULLETIN

Tokyo, Thursday, June 29 (AP).—American B-29s bombed Kimpo airfield near Seoul with "good results," today, the Far East Air Force announced.

Kimpo is 16 miles west of Seoul, Communist captured capital of South Korea.

The Air Force announcement did not say how many B-29s participated. Presumably the giant four-engine planes came from Guam, home base of B-29 runs against Japan in the Pacific War. Guam is about 1200 miles southeast of Seoul.

Tokyo (Thursday), June 29 (U.P.).—The South Korean army has rallied and is holding the Han River line south of Seoul with the aid of swarming fleets of United States war planes, advices from the front said today.

The Communists had taken Seoul yesterday and the Southern troops had started a demoralized retreat.

But at dawn today, front advices said, the Korean Seventh Division, rallied by its commander and re-equipped with arms flown from Japan, had fought off nightlong attempts to cross the river.

Further the advices said that the planes which took off in rain at dawn from Itazuke air base in western Japan arrived over the battle front—in swarms—to find clearing skies.

American military headquarters, and headquarters of the South Korean army remained at Suwon, 20 miles south of Seoul and about 16 miles at the nearest point south of the river.

United Press Correspondent Jack James drove for five hours in a jeep from Suwon to Taejon, temporary seat of the South Korean government, to telephone the latest front news to Tokyo.

Holding for the Moment

He reported that—if only for the moment—the South Korean army was holding better than it had done at any time since the Communists swept down across the 38th parallel frontier at dawn Sunday.

James told how Gen. Yoo Chai Heung, commanding the seventh division, rallied his men, herded them to Suwon, regrouped them and re-equipped them with arms which the United States Air Force flew in from Japan.

Yoo got them back to the Han River line, James reported, in time to prevent a Red crossing.

"The momentum of the Communist attack has definitely stalled," James reported.

The United States Air Force realizing that this would be a criti-

Taft Sees Acheson Reversed And Calls for Resignation

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) yesterday called for the resignation of Secretary of State Dean Acheson on the ground that his former opposition to intervention in the Far East has now been reversed.

Taft hit at Acheson in a Senate speech approving in general of the President's military support of South Korea and Formosa but challenging his right to act without Congressional approval.

In the same speech the Ohio Republican charged Administration "bungling" of Far Eastern foreign policy "invited" the Red attack on South Korea and led to the present "de facto war."

"I suggest," said Taft, "that any Secretary of State who has been so reversed by his superiors and whose policies have precipitated the danger of war, had better resign and let someone else administer the program to which he was, and perhaps still is, so violently opposed."

Small Group Applauds

Applause from a small group of Senators on the Republican side of the aisle followed Taft's sally. Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa), in the chair, admonished that applause was prohibited by the Senate rules. Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) observed that Senators, not the galleries, broke the rule.

So far as reporters in the gallery could determine, the handclapping came from Senators Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), William E. Jenner (R., Ind.), Arthur V. Watkins (R., Utah), John J. Williams (R., Del.) and John Bricker (R. Ohio).

In a barbed reply, Senator Lucas said it was "wonderful to have hindsight." He said Taft's charge that the President was responsible for what had happened in Korea would make the Russians "very happy."

"The Senator (Taft) grudgingly goes along with the general policy, but proceeds to charge bungling and inconsistency in foreign policy as though he had the panacea and remedy for everything," Lucas continued.

Only Help to Stalin

"The only thing such action does is to help Mr. Stalin," Lucas went on. "Everytime a speech of this kind is made under these circumstances I undertake to say that we are playing into the hands of the Kremlin, the very people we ought to be fighting, without attempting here to be fighting among ourselves."

Later Lucas read into the rec-

Cain Slows Approval

D. C. Rent Control Extension Expected in Congress Today

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Final congressional action on legislation extending District rent control until January 31, 1951, will be completed today, Capitol leaders predicted last night.

Clear sailing for continuing the local rent law—due to expire at midnight Friday—came after the Senate earlier had done a double-take on the compromise rent measure.

The Senate actually approved the rent conference report shortly after 2 p. m. yesterday, but on objection of Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), Vice President Barkley reversed himself, and accepted Cain's motion to reconsider the voice vote of approval.

For a moment, it looked as if the measure would go to the House for final approval and be forwarded to the White House last night.

Rallying from this setback, the Senate later agreed to vote on District rent control after 15 minutes' debate when the Senate convenes today.

Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), Senate Majority Leader, announced the agreement after a conference with Senator Cain, the last-ditch foe of rent curbs.

John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) House majority leader, announced the House would act on the measure after it clears the Senate.

The parliamentary flareup developed when Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) immediately after the draft extension vote, asked unanimous consent for Senate consideration of the rent conference report.

Quickly, Barkley declared,

26 Paratroopers Bail Out

Loaded Troop Carrier Plane Crashes on Night Maneuver

Nashville, Tenn., June 28 (U.P.).—A transport plane loaded with paratroopers caught fire tonight but most of those aboard apparently bailed out before the plane crashed and burned.

The Highway Patrol reported that one man was thrown clear of the wreckage and died en route to a hospital. The patrol retracted its earlier report that about 20 men were in the wreckage and said only three or four still were inside.

The plane, a two-engined Fairchild Packet of the 37th Troop Carrier Squadron, 314th Troop Carrier Wing, was one of 32 planes carrying paratroopers of the 11th Airborne Division at Camp Campbell, Ky., for a routine night jump.

Lieut. Paul L. Briand, public information officer at nearby Smyrna Air Force Base, where the plane was based, said the pilot radioed that he was falling out of formation with his right engine on fire.

A "stick" of 26 paratroopers had bailed out, he said.

Capt. Eric Swenson, public information officer of the Eleventh Airborne Division, reported that Lieut. Frederick M. Alderson, one of the paratroopers, had telephoned that all 26 men got down safely.

The plane crashed between Old Hickory and Hendersonville, Tenn., about 15 miles north of Nashville.

Berlin Reds Told U. S. Will 'Occupy' Formosa

Berlin, June 28 (U.P.).—The Soviet-controlled Berlin radio interrupted a music program today to say that American troops would occupy Formosa and the Philippines, and that "a new world war may possibly break out."

Stock, Commodity Markets Settle Down; Prices Rise

New York, June 28 (AP).—The frenzy was squeezed out of the stock and commodity markets today.

Trading quieted down and price changes moderated after two days of wide swings attributed to war nerves.

Stock prices regained a portion of the big losses of Monday and Tuesday on the New York Stock Exchange. Trading was at a good pace—2,600,000 shares—but nothing like the headlong downhill rush of the previous sessions which approached five-million-share days.

Buyers were in the market for shares closely allied to war activities—the aircrafts, rails motor and steels. Price advances ranged up to $4 a share. The Associated Press average closed 90 cents higher than Tuesday.

Most commodity markets were much quieter than the stock exchanges, and most price changes were small.

Can Tide Be Turned? Answer Is Due Soon

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Military officials here saw four major imponderables—now very difficult to estimate—as determining whether the tide of the Korean fighting can be turned with the present planned American and U.N. participation.

These factors, still obscured by lack of information, should be clarified soon. That is undoubtedly the purpose of General MacArthur's visit to Korea and back of the reported "alert" given to American ground forces in Japan.

The question marks:

1. What is the condition of the South Korean troops thrown back by the invading Communists from North Korea? Can they be regrouped, hold and eventually counterattack?

2. Will the present "terrible" weather break soon and long enough for United States Air Force fighter-bombers to play a major role in stopping the North Korean tanks and advancing troops?

3. Can the technical difficulties of providing close air-ground coordination between American pilots and Korean troops be met quickly enough so the airmen can tell friend from foe?

4. Can additional artillery, antitank guns, bazookas and ammunition available in Japan be gotten into the hands of the troops and put to effective use in time?

MacArthur's chief interest, of course, is getting a reliable answer to question No. 1.

As to the present fighting strength of the South Korean army, information given to reporters at yesterday's Pentagon "briefings" did not seem to jibe with some press dispatches from the Far East.

Army spokesmen said yesterday morning that reports received from General MacArthur indicated that despite the loss of Seoul and retreat below the Han River, the morale of the troops remained very good and they "decidedly were not retreating in disorder."

At the afternoon session for reporters, it was said that later reports described the situation as "relatively unchanged." Four South Korean divisions were seeking to regroup before Suwon for a stand against the three Communist divisions attacking with tank support in the main thrust down the center of the country south of Seoul.

Veteran combat officers cautioned that the press reports of "confused retreats" might not mean very much. Every retreat looks confused to any but a seasoned soldier with full knowledge of the local situation, it was pointed out.

Actually, they had little to go on as to the numbers of troops the defenders would be able to muster or their combat effectiveness. Generally, however, there was restrained optimism that the South Koreans would regroup and hold in the favorable defensive terrain and eventually be able to counterattack.

Prospects for any stretch of good weather, however, did not look too favorable. At Tuesday's briefing, military spokesmen said that generally fair weather could be expected in Korea from now until late October. Last night, the Army issued a correction.

This period of the year, it was said, is the rainy season in Korea and rains are usually fairly heavy and continued until fall.

Meteorologists report that the weather in Korea now is alternately bad and fairly good, with about 12 to 18 hours of each at a time. It may get worse. At present a weather front occupies an unusual snake-like position, providing the changing weather. If it straightens out and stays put, bad weather may be continuous.

"Very poor" weather was reported yesterday at the American Air Force bases in western Japan and rain and low clouds over the target area around Seoul. It greatly handicapped air operations, though jet F-80s flew 16 sorties and all-weather F-82s 50 sorties. They shot down seven North Korean planes and a F-51 manned by a South Korean pilot destroyed another. Not too much could be done against the invading army, however.

Air Force spokesmen said forward air controller units were already in existence in Japan and should be able to get into operation with the Korean army shortly. There was no information, however, as to their number.

Some B-26 bombers embarked on a mission over the front yesterday, the Air Force spokesman said, but finally turned back without dropping their bombs due to low clouds and inability to distinguish between the North and South Korean troops.

What is needed are radio-equipped American Air Force forward air controllers stationed with the troops on the ground. With such ground-air communications and clearing weather our air power should more than offset the present advantage the invaders now have in possessing tanks and more and heavier artillery than the defenders.

Army spokesmen also disclosed that some Russian tanks yesterday appeared in action with the North Korean Army, and said that estimates of the latter's armor have been scaled upward. Some 100 tanks, including 35-ton Soviet T-34, mounting a 76- or 88-millimeter gun, 12-ton T-70s and older Jap armor, are in action and proving a major factor in the Communist advancme.

Pentagon spokesmen, however, said there is no evidence the tanks were manned by Russians or that USSR pilots were in the Soviet planes in action. No USSR submarines or other warships have been sighted, it was said, though there are unconfirmed reports that a Russian-type destroyer took part in the amphibious landing at Samchok.

A Navy spokesman also said there was no confirmation of a reported amphibious landing at Urusanwan, 35 miles north of Pusan, the day before.

There were no reports as to the quantities of arms and ammunition moving from Japan to the Korean troops. One major stumbling block is the inability of very many of the soldiers to handle anti-tank guns, bazookas and heavier field guns effectively.

Military men here made it plain that no American combat troops are being sent to Korea. The soldiers moved there from Japan are solely Signal Corps troops and some air base personnel. The former are to establish radio communications back of the lines to replace the regular facilities lost when Seoul fell and the latter to service transport planes and combat craft forced down on South Korea airstrips.

The American warplanes will continue to actually operate from Japanese bases, as it would not be worth while to transport fuel, bombs, and supplies to South Korea and provide radar, fighter and ground troop protection for them, as long as the Jap fields are relatively close by. Fukuoka in western Japan is 375 miles from Seoul, within maximum range of the F-80 fighters although not giving them much time over the target.

Likewise, the Army spokesman pointed out that Maj. Gen. John H. Church, who at first was reported to have been put in command of the fighting in Korea, is there as an advisor to Korean army chiefs. He is the new head of the American Military Advisory Group—a job somewhat similar to that of Lieut. Gen. James A. Van Fleet in Greece.

cal day in the war and perhaps in Korea's history, put every ounce of strength into a strike against the Reds along the Han.

Dispatches had described the Southern Koreans, then still fleeing, as dazed and weary. James said the Seventh Division men were dog tired but fighting as of dawn today.

Kimpo Airport Lost

American headquarters reported that the Kimpo airport 16 miles northwest of Seoul was lost to the Reds. James said today that a small force of South Koreans, almost surrounded, was still fighting to hold its runways.

One day now might make all the difference, it was indicated—to give the South Koreans rest at last and permit their reorganization.

Must Hold Suwon

"The main objective of the Air Force, today is to hold Suwon," an Air Force spokesman said at the Itazuke air base in Western Japan from which Gen. Douglas MacArthur is flying aid to South Korea in answer to President Truman's orders and in behalf of the United Nations.

Front advices said Suwon was under nightlong attack from the Reds drawn up along the north bank of the Han River.

South Korean forces blew up all three bridges across the Han leading from Seoul to the heart of the south. Earlier reports said the South Korean second and seventh divisions were backed up to the northern bank of the Han in hopeless confusion. They had lost all heavy American equipment.

A group of 59 American advisory officers and men nearly were trapped by Communist tanks in fallen Seoul. Fifty-five fled by swimming, wading and boating across the 400-yard-wide river as a Russian tank bore down on them.

The other Americans jumped into jeeps in the dark early morning hours and sped across the mile-long main Han River Bridge a few minutes before it and the two other bridges were blown up.

Chased By a Tank

First Lieut. Gordon Mohr, Minot, N. Dak., and Capt. Elmer Lowery, San Diego, Calif., drove out of Seoul one jump ahead of a tank which fired at them for eight blocks.

Mohr, who has escaped three times before from the northerners, said:

"It was the damndest thing I have ever been through. The tank was firing like crazy but we were so close it couldn't hit us."

Mohr was captured by guerillas during an uprising at Yosu two years ago. He was sentenced to be shot and escaped.

The military advisory group, headed by Col. Sterling Wright was on its way here to establish new headquarters. All the group's members were safe.

Communications in Southern Korea were paralyzed with the fall of Seoul, the main relay point between North and South.

Without the shower of United States bombs and bullets and the Han River standing at least temporarily as a moat between the forces, the Northern army could make a clean sweep to the Im River, within shooting distance of Taejon, military sources said.

American officers and Koreans blamed a fear of tanks and the opposition's outranging 120-millimeter guns for the break-up of the Southern resistance. The South Koreans also are short of tanks.

It was raining this morning when the great air strike was started.

But the jets and the attack bombers roared off across the narrow strait to the battle front with their rockets and bombs.

A United Press dispatch from Itazuke, passed by censors, said:

"Everything necessary to carry out President Truman's instructions is being carried in transport planes and from the looks of the equipment going into the planes supreme headquarters seems to be taking a broad interpretation of President Truman's instructions to furnish 'air and sea support to the South Koreans.'"

Signal Corps Men Go In

Describing how transports were leaving for the front, the dispatch said:

"Bucket seat jobs are jammed with combat-kitted Signal Corps men who are carrying loaded rifles as well as walkie-talkies and short wave communications sets . . . ground troops are tight-lipped about the part they are playing in the war, apparently under strictest orders to say nothing."

The South Koreans have lost nearly all their heavy equipment.

United States warplanes are now their artillery, their anti-tank weapons, their close-support fire.

The effectiveness of the planes has been lessened by the disorganization of the South Koreans and their inability to regroup their shattered regiments and form a stable front.

Time is vitally important to the South Koreans. They need time to rest and re-equip and re-group into fighting units.

The Reds realize it. They are hammering their spearheads deeper and deeper. They want to smash resistance before American aid becomes effective.

"One good night's sleep is the most important thing in the world to the South Koreans no — and we are going to do our damndest to see that they get it," a military man said.

Supreme headquarters here admits frankly that today is most crucial.

The supreme command is throwing in everything despite poorest flying conditions in an attempt to grind the Reds to a halt.

Headquarters fears the South Koreans have just about reached their limit of endurance.

American strategy is to attack the Red supply lines and starve the invasion to a halt by preventing the transportation of the gasoline and ammunition upon which the tank-led Communist armies depend in their drive to the south.

Observers Gloomy

Observers returning from the front are gloomy over the prospects unless the air force is able to hamstring the invaders.

The Reds are using everything in the propaganda book to demoralize the South Korean troops and public.

The Korean Communist Pyongyang radio started the day by telling the people of Seoul to remain calm. Ordering workers to stay at their jobs, the radio said that those who did not would be punished.

Acting Communist Mayor Lee Sung Yup of Seoul greeted "the new citizens of North Korea."

Pyongyang radio asserted that northern planes attacked "south of Seoul"—the Suwon area—Tuesday and yesterday, bombing military cars and freight cars on the Seoul-Suwon railroad, and attacking gasoline depots. It was added that two "enemy" planes were destroyed on Suwon field—as MacArthur's headquarters had previously announced.

Dispatches from Itazuke indicated the urgency of the situation in describing sweating ground crewmen working throughout the night under floodlights, preparing the planes for a dawn takeoff.

The planes, despite the bad weather and slippery runways, were taking off with the precision of railroad trains.

Dispatches up to this morning gave a dark picture of the immediate situation, with the Han River the only barrier to a Communist sweep far south of Suwon.

On the planes which were lashing at Communist tanks, artillery emplacements, troop concentrations, truck convoys, roads and railroads depended the immediate fate of South Korea.

announcing the Red entry into Seoul claimed that at least 2800 South Koreans had been captured or killed in the drive to the city, an entire regiment of southern troops had deserted and that large quantities of weapons were captured.

Hongkong heard the Communist Pyongyang radio broadcast that 6000 South Korean troops were knocked out in the first three days of fighting.)

A communique describing the capture of the Ongjin Peninsula, northwest of Seoul, said that 2000 South Koreans had been killed or captured and six anti-tank guns, 140 trucks, 500 heavy and light guns and more than 2500 carbines taken.

Of a southern army totaled about 100,000 when the reds suddenly invaded Sunday morning, large units were isolated in the north by the Communist combination of direct thrusts and amphibious landings down the coasts.

The government of President Syngman Rhee and United States Ambassador John J. Muccio and his staff were at Taejon, 75 miles south of Suwon.

Returning from the United States to Korea, the Southern Army's Chief of Staff, Brig. Gen. Chung Il Kwun, said on arrival in Tokyo Thursday morning:

"If we can hold out for a month, the worst will be over."

Fears Querillas

Chung said loss of cities alone was not fatal, for "if any South Korean Army units remain organized, we can fight on."

He expressed concern, howver, over possible guerilla activities in the south.

The aid of guerillas was stressed by Communist broadcasts from captured Seoul.

These broadcasts contended guerillas were rising up all through the South and seizing villages.

They also asserted they had landed commandos near Pohangdog, 200 miles down the East coast south of the 38th parallel, and that they were driving westward towards the big inland city of Taegu.

The army spokesman in Washington said the northerners were spearheaded by about 100 tanks and apparently had more and bigger ones than had been known beforehand.

Late reports identified two Russian types: the 35-ton T-34, armed with 76 or 88-millimeter cannon, and the 12-ton T-70, with smaller guns.

The spokesman emphasized that South Korean morale remained high despite losses.

This was borne out by King's dispatches from Suwon, which said that despite being badly chewed up by the Red tanks, the Southerners were falling back in orderly fashion.

Soo Locks Are Closed To Public for Safety

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., June 28 (AP).—The Soo Locks, the gateway between Lake Huron and Lake Superior, today were ordered closed to the public for an indefinite period as a security measure.

Clifford Aune, superintendent of the locks, said orders to that effect were received from Lieut. Col. John D. Bristor, district engineer for the Army's Detroit district, Corps of Engineers.

Aune said no one without special identification would be allowed inside the gates until further notice.

Korean Morale a Big Factor, Fletcher Pratt Declares

(Well known writer on military and naval affairs, Fletcher Pratt is the author of many books on the American armed forces and on military and naval theory. Recent books include "Eleven Generals," "The Marines' War," "Fleet Against Japan," "A Short History of the Army and Navy.")

By Fletcher Pratt

New York, June 28.—There is good evidence that President Truman's decision to use American ships and planes in defense of South Korea has taken the Reds more by surprise than the people on our side were surprised by their attack. Part of this evidence is the slowness and apparent uncertainty of the Moscow reaction. If they had expected any such thing they would have been all ready with a series of denunciations far more violent and consistent than those actually launched, and would have been on the air with them at once.

Another part of the evidence is furnished by the military situation itself, which Truman's action has changed from a test by the Reds of the strength and solidarity of the democracies into a test of a far different kind, and one of a type which the Russians are far less willing to see made. As things now stand the military question is whether relatively light land forces with the support of aerial and naval elements can make headway against large and heavily equipped land forces with some air support.

The relation of this to the probable conditions of a major war elsewhere in the world is obvious. It is exactly the type of war we should have to fight if the Russians tried to take over Europe or the Middle East. But in this case the test is being made under conditions far from wholly favorable to the Reds. To be sure there are a good many elements in favor of the North Koreans. They have an almost overwhelming number of trained troops, some of them veterans of the war with China, many of them not yet committed to action. They have a large number of guerillas, trained by the Russians, who have a thorough knowledge of their form of war. The morale of the South Koreans is somewhat volatile, and they are not of a type likely to stand up well in retreating actions. American replacement and reinforcements foces have a long way to go across the Pacific.

On the other hand, most of the North Korean mechanized equipment, especially the tanks, appears to be left-over Japanese material. We know all about those Japanese tanks. Even the "heavies" do not stand up well under the fire of rockets and the type of bombing that can be delivered by our A-26 attack planes.

As of today, then, the advantage appears to be on our side, though only very slightly, and with the whole situation surrounded by uncertainties because this is a war from which so many of the normal technical elements are missing. There are no land mines. The South Koreans have no artillery to speak of and no anti-tank guns; they have to depend for their defense against tanks almost exclusively upon planes, and planes are a poor defense against tanks at night. The North Korean air support is not very good and will not get any better unless the Russians decide to put in really important forces of planes, manned by their own pilots. The quantity of technical troops, such as radar men and even truck drivers with their trucks, is probably very small on both sides. The sum of all this is that it's a poor man's war.

Now this is clearly not at all a type of war the Russians wish to make. In a military sense they are richer than we are, with far more tanks and artillery and vast numbers of troops. If they were going to have a trial war at all, they wanted it on a basis where these things would be the decisive factors. By his prompt action President Truman has not only served notice that the Hitler strategy of picking on the veakest member of the opposing group will no longer work but has also placed the fighting on the basis least favorable to the Communists. The main question now is whether South Korean morale will stand up.

Reds Hold U. N. Action Is Illegal

fashion by the Russian press.

Pravda published the story on page three, four paragraphs. Izvestia, the Soviet government organ, printed it on the back page, as did Red Star and Red Fleet, the organs of the army and navy. Pravda was the only one to comment editorially. Western diplomats here thought it highly significant that the reaction came so swiftly. Normally, it takes several days.

"The American government, with its characteristic unceremoniousness as regards international law, is grossly trampling on the United Nations charter, acting as though the United Nations organization did not exist at all," the Pravda editorial said.

"The question arises, who authorized the American government to take this step? In bringing its armed forces into action, did the United States government reach agreement on its policy with the United Nations organization, about their loyalty to which Truman and (Secretary of State) Acheson are so vociferous? Where and when did the Security Council take a decision freeing the hands of the United States of America in the acts of direct aggression undertaken by it?

"As is known, neither the United Nations organization nor any other international body has authorized the Government of the United States of America to undertake these actions with regard to Korea and China which Truman announced yesterday."

"In undertaking its openly aggressive act," Provda concluded, "The American Government evidently set itself the aim of confronting the United Nations organization with a 'fait accompli'." (Accomplished fact.)

The editorial repeated previous Soviet declarations that "the provocative actions of troops of the puppet government of South Korea directed against the Korean People's Democratic Republic (Northern Korea) unleashed military operations on the territory of Korea."

Reds May Strike Iran, Sen. Benton Cautions

Danbury, Conn., June 28 (U.P.)—Sen. William Benton, (D., Conn.), said today it is a "fair assumption that Communists may strike again."

Commenting on the Korean war, Benton mentioned Iran as a possible spot for more fighting.

Girl Writer Tells Of Rout From Seoul

By Marguerite Higgins
NYNT News Service

Suwan, Korea, June 28.—Sixty United States Army officers and four newspaper correspondents escaped by makeshift ferry across the Han River southward from Seoul this morning after the Korean Defense Ministry suddenly blew up all bridges, trapping the Americans for many hours in the isolated capital.

The spectacular series of demolitions lit the sky at about 2:30 a. m. (12:30 p. m. Tuesday EDT) and in effect put an end to the battle for Seoul. (This occurred about 30 miuntes after President Truman's announcement that American air and sea forces had been ordered into action.) The bridges were blown up despite the fact that most of the town was still in South Korean hands and only three tanks of the North Korean forces had been reported.

The dynamiting of one bridge took place even as South Korea's own troops were crowded on the span, as were personnel of the American Military Advisory Mission. Hundreds were killed and wounded. An entire truckload was blown straight into the air.

I heard the roar and saw a bright red sheet of flame as I was about to cross the bridge. Two other correspondents who were closer were injured. The windshield of a jeep shattered, cutting Burton Crane, of the New York Times, and Frank Gibney of Time magazine about the head and face.

Officers of the American military advisory group had only a few moments warning of the impending explosions of the main Han River span and all other railway bridges. Only a few hours before the dynamiting the military mission moved back into headquarters at Seoul in the hope that the South Korean defense line would hold north of the capital.

Directly after the blow-up Colonel Sterling Wright sought frantically in the darkness at headquarters, which was under bombardment, to collect American officers and equipment. Jeeping in convoy and in a tense atmosphere that was not eased by the whining of nearby artillery bursts and machine-gun chatter, the group tried in vain to find alternate escape routes to the south. Finally, as dawn broke, it became clear that the only hope of not being captured by the North Koreans was to move quickly leaving behind all vehicles and personal baggage.

We reached the river to find that panicky South Korean soldiers were defeating their own escape aims by rushing on board small available vessels in such great numbers as to swamp the tiny craft. With artillery range on the beach getting unnervingly accurate, the Americans finally resorted to pistol-point commandeering of a raft and a number of tiny rowboats.

Once across the river there was nothing to do but set out on foot for the closest town not in direct line of enemy invasion. The 60-man military group that had been advising the Koreans for more than one year doggedly traversed a muddy inland trail of Korea's mountanous terrain for fourteen miles before being picked up by jeeps. The single file line of soldiers was soon swollen by the huge stream of refugees fleeing from the Communists.

Even so illustrious a personality as Korean Minister of Interior Pak, who once was a Buddhist priest, trudged along with a pack on his back. South Korean soldiers in their G. I. uniforms also swelled our ranks, and before long the American officers were leading a ragamuffin army of tattered soldiers, old men, diplomats, children and a lady war correspondent.

Held 'Absurd'

Limiting U. S. Attacks to So. Korea Hit

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), declared yesterday that it is "absurd" and "unrealistic" for the United States to confine its air and sea bombardment to South Korean territory.

He told the Senate the entire Communist drive on the South Korean Republic is being supplied by North Korean bases.

In a "police action" he said, it seems "absurd . . . that all air bombardment should be in the territory of a victim of overt aggression. The Communist aggressor should not be allowed to feel secure in his own lair."

United States Air and Naval Forces have been ordered not to go above the border between North and South Korea.

710 Evacuees Landed After Reported SOS

Tokyo, June 28 (AP).—The Norwegian ship Reinholt, carrying 682 evacuees from Korea, and the Army ship William Lester, with six aboard, arrived tonight in Japanese ports.

Among the Reinholt's passengers were several hospital cases and five expectant mothers.

The William Lester, towing a large barge, the Jacona, with 22 evacuees aboard, pulled into Fukuoka, on the Island of Kyushu.

The Japanese Maritime Safety Board (Coast Guard) announced earlier the Lester had sent out an SOS. The Lester arrived under her own power and there was no indication of what caused her to send out a distress signal, if she did.

So. Korean Officials 'Abolished,' Reds Say

Tokyo, June 28 (AP).—The Moscow radio said today that South Korean officials were being "abolished" in areas seized by the Reds.

An English language broadcast heard here did not say how the local officials were being "abolished." Provisional peoples committees were being set up in captured areas.

Quoting a Tass dispatch from Pyongyang, the North Korean capital, the broadcast asserted the northerners were being "warmly welcomed" by the people of the south.

Two Labor M. P.s Ask Outlawing of A-Bomb

London, June 28 (U.P.).—Two Labor members of Parliament asked Prime Minister Clement Attlee today to urge the United Nations to outlaw the atom bomb because of the Korean war.

Emrys Hughes and James Carmichael requested an early debate soon on a motion deploring a Conservative member's suggestion in the House of Commons Monday that Britain should ask the U. N. to drop A-bombs on the capital of North Korea.

Stassen Meets Taft For Korea Discussion

Former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota yesterday visited the Capitol for a round of conferences on the Korean crisis with Senator Taft and other Republican leaders.

Stassen, now president of the University of Pennsylvania, told reporters he supported the military commitments made by the President but is not yet ready to comment on the over-all policy laid down.

He said "peace can be restored quickly" in Korea if other members of the United Nations join with us in aiding South Korea.

"But if they do not, then no one can predict the consequences." Stassen said.

Truman's Only Choice, Eisenhower Believes

New York, June 28 (AP).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in commenting on the Korean situation said today:

"The best chance for sustaining world peace was to take a firm stand, and when our government guaranteed the government of South Korea, there was no recourse but to do what President Truman said and did."

Pentagon Will Set Up 'War Room' for Press

An Army spokesman disclosed yesterday that a "war room" will be established for the press and radio in the basement of the Pentagon below Defense Secretary Louis Johnson.

To be ready in about a week, it will be equipped with maps, statistical information and officers qualified to "brief" newsmen.

It is expected that the "war room" will be a reasonably permanent installation, kept on a standby status for any future emergencies if the Korean fighting is settled quickly.

Slight Impact Seen Here on U. S. Economy

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Assuming that the Korean conflict remains localized, its impact on the American economy will be relatively slight, Washington economists believe.

Such effect as it may have, it is thought, will be to increase business activity and perhaps to exert some mild inflationary pressure, but—at the moment at least—nothing serious.

It is felt that there will certainly be some increase in present levels of defense spending. Part of it will be directly for General MacArthur's current operations in Korea, which are not cheap. In addition, it seems likely that the general level of defense authorizations will be upped, in response to the impact of the heightened tension and the new, firm, position taken by the United States in resisting further Communist aggression in the Pacific.

These sums will be, of course, deficit spending and to that extent inflationary.

Such reaction as businessmen may have, it is thought by economists here, will be in the direction of increasing inventories and stepping up purchases of certain imported raw materials. This will tend to drive some commodity prices higher.

Except for asking for new appropriations, in amounts not yet determined, the Administration does not contemplate requesting any substantive legislation to meet the new situation. It is felt that existing powers are adequate.

Some talk was to be heard yesterday of the desireability of asking for certain "stand-by" laws giving power to resume control of consumer credit, and for other controls. But the consensus was, however, that requests for this sort of authority at this time are not likely.

Published reports yesterday that plans for extensive control legislation have been drafted are to a certain extent true, but that they will be submitted with a demand for enactment appears most improbable at this time.

In the first place, it is felt they will not be needed provided the battle stays in Korea; if it does not, and full scale war arrives, then full scale wartime control laws would be needed.

Second, as long as the conflict is limited, it is felt that a request to Congress for control legislation would at once destroy the new closing of partisan ranks on the Korea issue that was effected by the President's decision on Tuesday.

British Offer Warships

under the U.N. We have taken this action. Commonwealth countries are equally members of the U.N. and it is, of course, for them to decide what action they will take."

He said notice of Britain's action was being sent to the United States, to the government of Southern Korea, to all Commonwealth governments and to the Security Council.

British naval forces now are in Japanese waters on summer exercises. The admiralty said the 22 or 23 vessels in that area include the light fleet aircraft carrier Triumph of 13,350 tons, with approximately 40 fighter planes aboard, and three cruisers—the 11,500-ton Belfast, the 8000-ton Jamaica and the Kenya, also 8000 tons.

In addition there are seven destroyers, either eight or nine frigates (escort vessels, slightly smaller than destroyers), an aircraft maintenance ship, a minesweeper and a hospital ship.

The boss of these forces is Admiral Sir Patrick "Daddy" Brind, whose flagship is the Alert, a frigate fitted with reduced armaments and extra accommodations as the commander-in-chief yacht for the China station. He is an old seadog with battle service in two world wars.

An Air Ministry spokesman hinted that the RAF may be thinking of some form of help in the Korean strife.

Chiang's Blockade of Coast, Including Shanghai to Cease

The Chinese Nationalists blockade of Shanghai and other Communist-held ports will be abandoned as one result of President Truman's declaration of Tuesday.

Informal assurances have already reached Washington that the blockade will be lifted promptly. Formal confirmation is expected soon from Chiang Kai-shek's headquarters on Formosa.

The President said in his statement that "I am calling upon the Chinese government on Formosa to cease all air and sea operations against the mainland," and added:

"The Seventh Fleet will see that this is done." Anauthoritative source explained yesterday that the blockade was definitely among the "air and sea operations" mentioned by the President. Since last summer, when Communist armies swept into the great port cities, Chiang's warcraft have mined the channels and maintained a partially effective blockade of ships carrying cargoes to and from the Communist mainland.

Repeatedly the blockade led to the shelling of American merchant ships and other incidents that brought headaches to the State Department.

The United States refused to recognize the legality of the blockade, but at the same time warned American shipowners to keep their ships away from the affected areas.

One company, the Isbrandtsen Line of New York, defied the State Department request, and issued statements calling for American naval action to break the blockade. At the same time a number of Chiang's supporters in Congress proposed using American warships to help the Nationalists enforce it.

Officials were confident yesterday that there would be no need for the Seventh Fleet to break up the blockade by force. So far the Nationalists on Formosa have seemed willing and glad to carry out President's Truman's request.

Continuance of the blockade would have involved the risk of accidents, or worse between the Chinese nationalist ships and the American warcraft patrolling the Formosa coast.

Its abandonment will not alter, for the moment, the American official policy of asking shipowners to keep their vessels away from Chinese ports. With naval action possible in the strait between Formosa and the mainland, Chinese waters are still regarded as dangerous for American vessels.

Muccio Foretold War in May, Says Brother

Providence, R. I., June 28 (U.P.)—John J. Muccio, United States Ambassador to Korea, revealed privately during a visit here one month ago that "the fight is on in Korea," his brother said today.

"It's not a cold war there any more; it's a hot one," Joseph Di Muccio quoted his brother as saying in May.

Di Muccio explained that his brother "says very little about his work," but wrote him recently he "had the idea that the South Koreans could take care of themselves."

Muccio, who was born in Italy 50 years ago and was brought to this country by his parents at the age of 1 year, has been a career diplomat for 29 years.

He served nine years in various China posts and also in Europe and South America. He was appointed to his present position August 12, 1948.

"Little did he dream then of the hot box he was stepping into," Di Muccio said.

Head of Notre Dame Lauds Truman Action

New York, June 28 (AP).—The Rev. John J. Cavanaugh, president of Notre Dame University, said today that in the Korean situation President Truman "has done what a nation with self-respect has to do." He made the statement as he sailed on the liner Ile de France for Rome to attend a general chapter of his order, the congregation of the Holy Cross. He said the meeting will last four or five weeks and it will discuss educational, social and economic problems, and, he added with a smile, "how to get along with the commies."

Soviet Face-Saving Made Still Possible

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson kept a way open to Russia yesterday to call off the Korean war without too much outright loss of face.

He did so by resolutely refusing, at his press conference, to say a word that would connect the Soviet Union with the invasion of Southern Korea.

The Secretary told several questioners that he did not want to get into any speculation on what Russia might do now. We are dealing with attacks on Korea and the possibility of attacks on other areas, he said.

And he gave the impression that, officially and formally, the United States still regarded the Korean invasion as an action by the North Korean Communist government rather than by the Soviet Union. President Truman was careful to take the same position in his statements of Monday and Tuesday, and the U. N. Security Council did the same in its resolutions of Sunday and Tuesday.

No reply had come last night to the American note, delivered by Ambassador Alan G. Kirk in Moscow but not yet made public, asking the Russians to use their "good offices" in Northern Korea to stop the fighting.

The first reaction of any kind from Russia was the Pravda editorial, which asked "have the Americans gone too far?" Acheson said he had looked over the editorial.

The only thing that stood out of it, he said, was the charge that the United Nation Security Council had acted illegally yesterday, since Russia was not represented.

Acheson repeated that this argument was wholly unwarranted, since the Security Council could not be continually and wholly frustrated by the willful absence of some of its members. Russia has been boycotting the Security Council and other U. N. bodies since January.

Yet some officials here were not without hope that the Russians would be cautious in their answer to Kirk, although they were certain that any Soviet response would be shrouded in a smoke-screen of propaganda.

The Pravda editorial itself, though shrill with familiar charges of American "aggression," was regarded as cautious and non-committal by Soviet standards. It did not threaten, and it suggested that the Soviet authorities were still thinking carefully about their response to the American and the United Nations decisions.

At the start of his press conference Acheson volunteered a statement saying that "this is a time for very steady and sober talk and action."

Acheson's Statement On U. S. Council Action

Following is the text of Secretary of State Dean Acheson's news conference statement on Korea:

There are a few points which I should like to make before we go into the questions about the matter which I am sure is uppermost in all of your minds. That is the announcement by the President yesterday of his decisions which he had taken. I will not go into those decisions in detail but make some points about them.

The first point I want to make is our feeling of deep gratitude here in the department, and responsibility also, for the almost unanimous world reaction which has come from the action taken by the United Nations, and from the announcement made yesterday by the President of his actions in support of the United Nations.

In all parts of the world where free opinion exists there has been an immediate response—a response to the realization that this was, if there ever was in the world, a test of whether the United Nations is going to survive.

This attack was the most cynical, brutal, naked attack by armed forces upon an undefended country that could occur. The world has understood that, and it has understoood that the actions taken by the United States have been taken in support of the United Nations.

The second point I want to make is that as soon as we knew that this attack had taken place, and had immediately conveyed that information to the President and gotten his instructions, it was the view of the President, and of the entire government of the United States, that our first responsibility was to report this to the United Nations. This was done in the middle of the night on Saturday, June 24, and a meeting of the Security Council was called on Sunday, June 25. From then on all action in Korea has been under the aegis of the United Nations. That is a very important point.

The next point I want to make is one that I am sure you understand. It is that the entire action of the Government of the United States, since a late hour on Saturday when this information came to us, has been taken under presidential leadership and direction. Here, as in many other situations in the years in which I have been Undersecretary and Secretary, the President has been faced with the most difficult decisions which had to be made quickly and after taking full advice he has assumed the responsibility and he has made the decision.

The fourth point I would like to make is that there has been complete unity among the President's advisers, civil and military. The Departments of State and Defense have worked practically as one department ever since this matter arose, and in anticipation of possible difficulties of this sort, so that we were able on the shortest possible notice to present completed staff work to the President. He had the view of his advisers without having differences among his advisers.

The fifth point I should like to stress is the unity which existed at the President's meeting yesterday at which the Secretary of Defense and I, and our advisers, were present with the Congressional leaders. Here, again, the understanding of the problem, the understanding of the actions taken showed complete unity.

The sixth point I should like to make is that with very few exceptions the press and radio of the United States has been unified in its comments upon what was done, and the necessity for doing it. I assume, and I think I assume justly, that that attitude on the part of the press and the radio indicate there is similar unity among the people of the United States.

Finally I should like to leave with you the thought that the complexities and difficulties of the international situaion are great. This is a time for very steady and sober talk and action. It is not a time for general speculation, for trying to stir up difficulties which don't exist, for imagining possibilities which are remote. It is a time for the very greatest steadiness and it is a time, as I have often said in the past, where, more than ever, you gentlemen share with the officials of the Government a very deep responsibility, which I feel sure you are quite aware of.

Symington Predicts There'll Be No War or Rigid Controls on Economy

Chairman W. Stuart Symington of the National Security Resources Board predicted yesterday the Korean fighting will not erupt into a full-blown war that would force his agency to lay down rigid controls over prices, wages and jobs.

Symington's board is ready with plans to revive the controls if they are needed, but he said after a White House conference that he does not expect the Korean crisis to draw the United States into a declaration of war.

If it should, President Truman would call on the NSRB for blueprints on rationing, civil defense and other controls over industrial and civilian activity. In all probability, Symington would recommend that most of the old World War II controls be re-imposed.

In many cases, however, they presumably would have to go much further. An all-out atomic war would chew up the Nation's raw resources at an even faster rate than the machines of World War II, leaving even less for civilians.

The one weak planning spot is civil defense. The board's civil defense director, Paul J. Larsen, has been on the job for only three months and has set September 1 as the deadline for a finished blueprint on homes defenses against atomic warfare.

In addition, there is some squabbling over who should pay for the system. Congress has appropriated no money for the program, and State and local authorities are looking to the Federal Government to foot the bill.

Controls over production probably would be more complete than in the early days of World War II.

Several hundred manufacturers of machine and metal-cutting tools have on hand 900 million dollars worth of "phantom orders" from the NSRB. They would start work on them immediately in case of war, assuring weapons manufacturers an adequate supply.

Security Lid Clamped On D. C. Naval Units

See 'War Threat'

Berlin Reds Denounce U. S. Actions

Berlin, June 28 (AP).—East Berlin Communists will stage an outdoor mass meeting in the Russian sector tomorrow to denounce President Truman's actions in the Korean situation.

The Communist peace partisans committee announced the rally today. It will be held at 5 p. m. (11 a. m. EST) in the Lustgarten, the big square at the end of Unter den Linden where the Communists usually hold their spectacles.

"Truman threatens with war—we must enforce peace" is the announced slogan for the rally, for which the Soviet-controlled Berlin radio demanded a big turnout from all the city.

Communist controlled organizations throughout all east Germany adopted resolutions aimed at what they called "American aggression." Demonstrations, which the Communists said were spontaneous, were staged in Halle, Magdeburg and other major cities. The entire Communist controlled press angrily assailed the United States as the promoter of a third world war.

In west Germany, the Communists also pressed their anti-American agitation. The Soviet-controlled ADN news agency said Communists in Stuttgart issued orders for a "peace rally" August 6 under the slogan: "Remember the anniversary of Hiroshima," the atom-bombed Japanese city.

The Potomac River Naval Command yesterday clamped down the lid on general visiting at the more than 30 installations under its jurisdiction.

Mounting security-consciousness in the area was marked further by a Second Army order out of Fort George G. Meade, Md., which instructed every unit to keep at least 50 percent of personnel on post at all times.

Most Second Army units have been operating on a five-day week, with only skeleton details kept on duty over the weekend.

In another move to shore up the capitalis defenses, Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), of the House District Committee, scheduled an extraordinary session at 10:30 a. m. today to consider his bill to set up an office of civil defense in the District.

D. C. Officials to Testify

District officials are scheduled to testify on the bill which District Commissioners requested three months ago. The committee meeting will be open.

The Potomac River Naval Command security order will apply to such installations as the Naval Air Station, Anacostia, Naval Gun Factory, Naval Receiving Station, Anacostia, Naval Ordnance Laboratory, Silver Spring, Naval Research Laboratory, Bellevue, Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent, Md., and the Dahlgren Proving Grounds.

Visitors will be kept from any Navy ships berthed at Navy docks. This throws a hitch into July 4 plans at the Naval Gun Factory, where fleet units were to have been open for public inspection.

Pentagon instructions left specific security steps up to individual commands. The order was "merely a precautionary measure," it was emphasized.

Bolling Base Jam

New Bolling Air Force Base regulations requiring identification at the gate caused a ¾-mile traffic jam yesterday morning as work-bound airmen and employes fumbled for their tags.

The same setup was instituted at Andrews Air Force Base, which aso had an "open gate." Visitors to the two Air Force bases will be allowed aboard only when identified by persons with whom they are visiting.

Defense buildings in the area, including the Pentagon, are still keeping open gates, although officers pointed out that secret sections always have been blocked off.

Fort Myer and Fort Belvoir also are remaining open with normal MP patrol. The Naval Air Station at Anacostia expanded its communications watches to expedite handling of dispatches.

Allen Sees Tito On Yugoslavs' Korean Stand

Belgrade, June 28 (NYHT).—American Ambassador George V. Allen called on Premier Marshal Tito this morning to discuss Korea. It is believed that the envoy tried to persuade the Marshal to alter Yugoslavia's stand on the Korean war in future meetings of the United Nations Security Council, but it is not believed that Allen's demarche met with any immediate success.

The Ambassador's call followed the action of Belgrade's delegate at the security council yesterday in casting the sole vote against an unprecedented United States resolution calling for U. N. members to provide aid to the beleaguered South Korean republic.

Despite a divergence of views, the discussion between Allen and Marshal Tito is understood to have taken place in a cordial atmosphere.

The Yugoslav position was somewhat clarified today after a virtual silence here on Korea since Sunday. The position is that Yugoslav collaboration with the United States on Korea would be seized upon by the Soviet Union to step up its campaign against the Tito regime and possibly launch an armed attack.

This was the line put out in almost identical form by at least two ranking Yugoslavs today.

While western officials would like to have Yugoslav support on Korea, they pointed out two mitigating factors in Yugoslavia's "unsatisfactory" stand at the UN.

First, according to reports received here, Belgrade has not questioned the legal right of the Security Council to act as it did while meeting without the Soviet Union. Second, it has not attacked the presence of the Chinese Nationalists during the current session.

Air Education Conference Opens At G. W. University

A three-day conference on aviation education opened yesterday at George Washington University School of Education under sponsorship of the school and the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Dr. Harold E. Mehrens, supervisor of the aviation education division of the CAA and a lecturer at GW, stressed that teaching must take into consideration the changes in space and time relationships brought about by aviation.

Dr. Wilhelmina Hill of the United States Office of Education, discussed aviation in the experience curriculum of the elementary school. Recently released aviation films were shown last night in connection with the conference, which is being attended by teachers and school officials from the District and nearby States. Dr. John H. Furbay, director of air world education for Trans World Airlines, will address the conference at 8 tonight in the Department of the Interior auditorium.

U. N. Plans Committee to Coordinate Help

Lake Success, N. Y., June 28 (U.P.). Top United Nations officials today intensified efforts to mediate the Korean crisis as the U. N. canvassed all members to see how far each would go in answering the Security Council appeal for enough fighting aid to hurl back the Red Korean invasion.

A uniform letter was in the works asking each nation to specify what it was willing to add to American air and sea forces ordered to defense of South Korea and Formosa by President Truman yesterday.

The U.N. was expected to form a committee, probably under Lie himself, to act as coordinating agency.

Two high aides of Secretary General Trygve Lie motored to the Russians' Glen Cove, Long Island, estate today to confer with chief Soviet delegate Jacob A. Malik.

Informed sources said they made an effort to impress upon Malik the counciliatory elements in President Truman's for-the-most-part uncompromising Far East policy order yesterday.

Those elements center on Mr. Truman's suggestion that Formosa's future status should be determined by the U. N. or in a Japanese peace treaty.

That suggestion has been interpreted by highest officials here as open recognition by the United States that the Chinese Nationalists do not control any Chinese territory because Formosa is not technically part of China.

The conclusion to be drawn is that the way might thus be open for eventual ouster of the Chinese U. N. delegation, whose continued presence has been the excuse for Russia's 24-week-old U. N. boycott.

Thus, it would appear, there was something for the Russians carefully woven into Mr. Truman's momentous policy statement—if they want to deal for it. However, there could be no question at this stage of the game of admitting the Chinese Communists to the United Nations.

Truman Calls Point 4 Best Answer to Reds

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday described the Point Four program as the American counterweapon to the "Communist weapon of fear."

The Chief Executive, in his first presidential speech before a union convention, told the seventeenth annual convention of the American Newspaper Guild, meeting at the Statler:

"The recent unprovoked invasion of the Republic of Korea by Communist armies is an example of the danger to which the underdeveloped areas particularly are exposed."

Mr. Truman declared:

"It is essential that we do everything we can to prevent such aggression . . . We must and we shall give every possible assistance to people who are determined to maintain their independence. We must counteract the Communist weapon of fear."

The Chief Executive warned that it is not enough to help the free nations build strong defenses against aggression. We must help those countries to attain better living conditions, he said.

"The growing strength of these countries is important to the defense of all free nations against Communist aggression," Mr. Truman asserted.

"It is important to the economic progress of the free world. And these things are good for us as well as good for them."

The President observed that it is possible to make tremendous improvements in the underdeveloped areas by simple, inexpensive means, such as improvement of seed and animal stocks, control of insects, dissemination of health information. Such a program "can make great changes almost overnight by giving expert technical assistance on a genuinely cooperative basis, Mr. Truman said.

Mr. Truman cited three examples of help to underdeveloped areas:

In a single year, a World Health Organization malaria control team eliminated the mosquito peril from a rich farming area of India, thereby putting back into production land that had been abandoned.

In Iran, the Near East Foundation, an American voluntary organization, tripled the production of grain over a four-year period through a demonstration project.

In Liberia, an American economic mission has laid out roads and helped open up an iron deposit, while farm experiments have helped expand production of rice, palm oil and cocoa.

These examples, Mr. Truman said, are previews of what a full-scale Point Four program can mean in the future. He added:

"If we fail to carry out a vigorous Point Four program, we run the risk of losing to communism, by default, hundreds of millions of people who now look to us for help in their struggle against hunger and despair."

Earlier, Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.) told the delegates, representing 25,000 newspaper and news service employes, that the American publishers ought to do "some soul-searching about why the American people have grown not to respect the editorial page." He called on the guild to fight the trend toward "monopoly" in the daily newspaper field. He added:

". . . I will say, we still have a good deal of freedom of the press—probably the most that the modern world knows. In a sense we have not lost the fight. But we must take preventive action."

The convention yesterday adopted a resolution calling on all guild locals to work for home rule in the District.

Truman Greeted by Guild Leaders . . .

BEFORE ADDRESS—President Truman was met by officers of the American Newspaper Guild as he arrived to address their convention at the Statler Hotel. The group (from left); Sam B. Seamen Ask New War Bonus

San Francisco, June 28 (AP).—A meeting was scheduled for today between maritime union representatives and members of the Pacific Maritime Association to determine what bonus changes should be made for crews of ships sailing into war zones.

The unions yesterday demanded "danger zone bonus adjustments" because of the Korean situation.

The "war bonus" for ships sailed into some China coast zones presently is 100 percent.

Most of the unions, meanwhile, pledged their support to Government moves to aid South Korea.

Among these were the independent Maritime Firemen's Union, the AFGL Sailors Union of the Pacific, the CIO National Maritime Union and the AFL Masters, Mates and Pilots.

Spokesmen for the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union—which is headed by Harry Bridges—were not available for comment.

Motorist Finds Body Caught Under Auto

Chicago, June 28 (AP).—When Lionel Ives, 40, a salesman, stopped his car early oday to investigate a scraping noise he found the body of a man caught on the car's undercarriage.

Ives told police he drove about a mile after first hearing the noise, then stopped and discovered the body.

The dead man was identified as Thurston Arcee, 40, a dock worker.

Authorities said Arcee apparently was struck by another car and was lying in the street when Ives passed over him.

Attacks on U. S. Intervention Cheered by 9000 at N. Y. Rally

New York, June 28 (AP).—Some 9000 persons met at a Communist-blessed Madison Square Garden rally tonight and applauded speakers who attacked United States intervention in Korea.

"We are the interventionists. . . . We have taken over the United Nations," the Rev. Richard Morford told the group as they cheered him.

Morford is executive secretary of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, cited by Federal officials as a Communist organization.

The "Hands Off Korea" rally was sponsored by the Civil Rights Congress, tabbed a subversive organization by the Attorney General's office.

The Communist newspaper, the Daily Worker, for several days has been urging a large attendance at the mass meeting. It originally was planned as a protest against the conviction of the 11 American Communist leaders.

But the Korean war led the congress to switch plans and schedule the mass meeting as a protest against American aid to South Korea. Nearly 60 police were assigned to the Garden.

They arrested James Garry, 35, an organizer for the United Electrical Workers (Ind.), which recently was ousted from the CIO on grounds it is Communist-dominated.

Michael Siomkim of the rival CIO International Union of Electrical Workers, said Garry grabbed a $350 camera from his hands, ripped out the film and smashed it. Siomkim told police he was trying to take Garry's picture as the U. E. organizer entered the garden.

Morford told the group United States leaders are making "a desperate drive to regiment the American people for a shooting war because the cold war has failed."

Another speaker was Ring Lardner, jr., one of the so-called "Hollywood 10" cited for contempt of Congress for failure to answer questions as to whether they had Communist affiliations.

Taft Calls on Acheson to Resign

ord a prepared statement released in New York by Former President Herbert Hoover.

Hoover said: "When the United States draws the sword, there is only one course for our people. Like others, I have opposed many of our foreign policies, but now is not the time argue origins, mistakes, responsibilities or consequences. There is only one way out of situations as this: That is to win. To win, we must have unity of purpose and action."

Taft broke his overnight silence on the President's Korean move by saying he believed the "general principle" laid down by Mr. Truman Tuesday is right.

"I see no choice except to back up wholeheartedly and with every available resource the American men in our armed forces who have been moved into Korea," Taft said.

But he added that the time was "unfortunate" and defense of Korea would be "difficult."

"I sincerely hope that the policy thus adopted will not lead to war with Russia," he said. "We can only hope that the leaders of that country have sufficient judgment to know that a world war will result in their own destruction, and will therefore refrain from such acts as might bring about a tragic conflict."

The chairman of the Senate GOP policy committee termed the North Korean attack an "outrageous act of aggression" and said it was probably instigated by Soviet Russia.

He argued however that there would have been no attack if the United States had retained our armed forces in Korea and given the same "notice" a year ago that Mr. Truman gave Tuesday.

"In short," Taft told the Senate, "this entirely unfortunate crisis has been produced, first, by the outrageous aggressive attitude of Soviet Russia, and second, by the bungling and the inconsistent foreign policy of the Administration."

Long Urged Formosa Aid

The Ohioan reminded the Senate that he and other Republicans had long urged defense of Formosa but as late as last January their proposals were ridiculed by the President, Acheson, Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), and other Administration leaders.

He quoted some of the shafts aimed by Connally at Republican proposals to support Formosa and recalled Connally had said it would risk losing American lives in another world war.

He said Connally "has a hard time supporting the vagaries of Administration foreign policy, but he apparently follows the action of the President and the Secretary of State, whatever that may be."

The Texan remained seated through the attack. Later Connally read into the record a line from the Security Council's resolution calling on members of the United Nations to furnish assistance to South Korea to repel the Communist invasion.

Indirect Reply to Taft

It was an indirect answer to Taft's charge that the President lacked authority to order planes and ships to Korea.

Taft said he would have voted for a resolution to send such aid to Korea, but did not believe the President had the right to do so either under the United Nations Charter or the Constitution, without prior Congressional approval.

Taft said these "bungling" policies produced the present crisis:

1. The decisions at Yalta and Potsdam to partition Korea with the Russians, stemming from a "sympathetic acceptance of communism as a peace-loving philosophy."

2. The Administration's Chinese policy, which he said encouraged the Communists to think "they could get away with their grab." He said Secretary reaffirmed "the general policy of doing nothing in China" in a National Press Club speech January 11.

3. Withdrawal of our troops from Korea, "because it was said it was impossible to defend Korea on a military basis."

4. The Administration's belief that the United States "would have an impregnable defense line without Formosa and presumably without Korea."

Lucas replied that it was easy to dig up "presumed or supposed mistakes," that everybody, even Governments, make mistakes, but the real need now was for National unity.

The Democratic leader said the decisions at Yalta were based on the belief of our military that we could save the lives of 100,000 American soldiers "if we could get Russia into the war.

As for the President's power to send planes and ships to Korea, Lucas said he had the right not only under the Charter but under "the traditions and precedents established more than 100 times" by other Presidents.

Senator Warren Magnuson told the Senate that many of those now criticizing the President's move opposed fortifying Guam before the Japanese Pearl Harbor attack.

"Hindsight," said Magnuson, "may depend on the year in which events happen."

During the debate, Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.) argued that the President is within his rights so long as American operations stay within the Thirty-eighth Parallel. Lucas agreed.

Later, however, Senator Wiliam F. Knowland (R., Calif.) argued that our planes shouldn't be confined to the Thirty-eighth Parallel. He pointed out that North Korean military posts and supplies are beyond that line and to confine the operation might make South Korean civilians the chief victims.

be maintained by voluntary enlistment."

The Secretary referred to the current strength authorized by appropriations, aides said. That limits the Army to 630.00 officers and men, the Air Forces to 416,000 and the Navy-Marine Corps to 460,600. All three services are somewhat—but not dangerously—below strength now.

Use of the draft to fill Army vacancies is contemplated only if voluntary enlistments slack off still more sharply or the world situation requires a partial mobilization, officials say. Similar considerations apply to use of the Guard-Reserve call power, it was said.

Quick Expansion Possible

In such cases the President could expand the armed forces to their maximum authorized peacetime limit—2,005,882—837,000 in the Army, 666,882 in the Navy and Marines and 502,000 in the Air Force. This would permit the Army to add 244,000 men, the Navy and Marines 239,882 and the Air Force 152,000.

However, as any such boost would send defense expenditures up by at least a billion dollars and require Congress to vote such extra money, there is no present plan for such action, officials stated.

Congress acted with unusual speed to grant the extended draft and reserve mobilization power, following the Korean invasion. The Senate and House were deadlocked over much more limited presidential powers to call up men for the military services until the events of the last few days changed the entire picture.

The selective service provisions of the extended law are exactly like those of the 1948 Draft Law. Men aged 18 through 25 are required to register, and those 19 through 25 are eligible for induction.

Short of actual war, most veterans of World War II cannot be called. In the same status, under current draft regulations, are men with wives, children or other bona fide dependents. This could be changed in an emergency, though there is no present intention to do so.

Deferments also are provided for "essential" men in agriculture, science, industry, etc. Local boards, now in existence, decide who they may be.

Except for a few stragglers no one has been drafted since January, 1949, and all but the handful of stragglers have been released. Voluntary enlistments have kept the Army up to strength without such calls since then.

Under the extended law, draftees or Guardsmen and Reserves are required to serve 21 months if called.

Manila Speeds Drive on Huks, Armed Forces Put on the Alert

Manila, June 28 (AP).—The Philippine Government moved today to intensify its drive against Communist Hukbalahap dissidents.

In the wake of Communist invasion of South Korea, Defense Secretary Ruperto Kangleon said there had been reports the Huks may try to stage new and concerted attacks against government troops.

"Immediate and drastic action" against subversive aliens if they threaten the nation's peace and security was promised by Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Felino Neri.

Neri conferred with top Foreign Office and Intelligence officials to plot a course of action to rid the islands of these undesirables.

Members of the Chinese Nationalist Embassy attended the meeting, presumably to discuss means of screening Chinese Communists in the islands. The embassy pledged its full cooperation.

Yesterday, all Philippine armed forces were placed on a full alert. Leaves of all pilots were cancelled. The naval patrol went on a war footing. Defense Secretary Kangleon said the country was "ready."

Government officials solidly applauded President Truman's decision to assist the southern republic in Korea. President Quirino said he expected America now would "fully develop" its naval bases in the Philippines.

U. S. Pilots Flying First Aid Planes Given Indo-China

Saigon, Indo-China, June 28 (AP). United States Air Force pilots will fly eight C-47 transport planes to Saigon in the first delivery of military aid to bolster French forces in their fight against the Communist-led Vietminh. They will be formally accepted Saturday.

The twin-engine transports are scheduled to be flown from Clark Field in the Philippines on the last leg of their trip from the United States. The C-47 was the workhorse transport of the American Airforce during World War II. They will be followed by Navy Hellcat fighters.

The initial American aid will be welcomed by French and Viet-Nam officials in an atmosphere of greatly improved morale.

American intervention in the Korean conflict has inspired confidence here in the determination of the United States fully to back up its Far Eastern policy, including support of the Franco-Vietnamese forces.

U. S. Bishop Directed Spy, Romania Says

Prague Czechoslovakia, June 28 (AP).—Romania put Nicolau Popescu on trial today charged with being a spy in the service of Bishop Gerald P. O'Hara of the Savannah-Atlanta Roman Catholic diocese.

Bishop O'Hara is papal nuncio to Romania. Popescu was his chauffeur.

The official Czechoslovak news agency said in a dispatch from Bucharest, Romania, that the indictment read in court said Popescu began spying for Bishop O'Hara in 1948 at the latter's invitation.

It said that after Popescu began his spying Bishop O'Hara doubled his wages, gave him a monthly clothing allowance and later tried to arrange his escape from Romania when Popescu was about to be arrested.

The indictment, as received here, alleged that Popescu worked closely with Msgr. Guido del Mestri, counsellor of the nunciature, to send espionage material abroad.

The charge sheet claimed Popescu confessed that Msgr. del Mestri used to sneak in and out of the nunciature in civilian clothes after changing from his clerical habit in a parked car.

Six other persons went on trial with Popescu.

One of these, Vasile Ciobanu, a former pilot in the Romanian Airlines, was accused of having had dealings with United States Naval Attache Capt. Eugene Karpe, who died mysteriously in an Austrian railway tunnel in February. Karpe had just left Romania.

The indictment said Ciobanu had asked Karpe for a drug which he could slip to an airlines pilot to induce him to flee Romania. Instead, the indictment said, Karpe "gave him one dollar for the escape."

Popescu, Ciobanu, Alexandru Ciocalteu, Mircea Gherghe Bente and Nicolas Valsan are accused of high treason, plotting against the Communist-led state and preparing to flee the country.

Kiazim Aktuan, a Turkish citizen, was charged with espionage.

Parliament Told Leopold Will Be Back

Brussels, June 28 (U.P.).—Premier Jean Duvieusart told Parliament today his all-Catholic government will bring back exiled King Leopold to his throne, but hinted the government may consider a compromise later.

Duvieusart, presenting the program of his first all-Social Christian government, said when the 6-year-old regency of Prince Charles ends, "the government will be alert to all moves that could promote and facilitate . . . the rallying of all the forces of the nation around the throne."

The Socialists, headed by former Premier Paul-Henri Spaak, repeatedly interrupted the Prime Minister with boos.

Duvieusart's statement that the government wanted to rally the country around the throne apparently meant it would consider the King's recent offer to delegate his powers temporarily to his son, Crown Prince Baudouin—but only after Leopold returned.

The Prime Minister promised the government will demand the repeal of the 1945 law which bars the King's return to the throne as soon as both Houses of Parliament give his program a vote of confidence.

21 American Republics Support U. N. Decisions

The 21 American republics yesterday declared their "firmest support" for the decisions of the United Nations in the Korean crisis.

A resolution adopted by the Council of the Organization of American States also affirmed the "continental solidarity which ties the American States."

Costa Rican Ambassador Mario Echandi proposed the resolution.

The OAS council is the central agency of the 21 American countries.

Queuille Again Tries Cabinet

Paris, June 28 (AP).—Former Premier Henri Queuille agreed tonight to make another try at forming a new French government after Georges Bidault refused the job.

Queuille, a Radical Socialist, told reporters he was accepting the task in view of the international situation. He said he would try to regroup the non-Communist parties.

This was Queuille's second attempt to end the governmental crisis. He gave up the first attempt yesterday.

This time he had the promise of Guy Mollet, Socialist secretary-general, that the Socialists would vote to confirm his appointment as premier. Queuille needs 311 of the 621 votes in the National Assembly.

Queuille agreed to go before the National Assembly on Friday for the vote. The first time he had merely accepted a "mission of information" from President Vincent Auriol and subsequently reported his failure to line up enough strength.

Bidault's middle-of-the-road coalition government was voted out of office Saturday.

Settle for 'Kelly' If You're in Doubt

A French Embassy official offered some help yesterday to pronounce Queuille's name. He suggested they settle for "Kelly," going easy on the y and rounding out the vowel.

Reservists Hear Truman

Naval Reserve, said that if the President's action "means war," we are better off to have it now than to have it forced upon us at a time and place of Russia's choosing."

"I decry the philosophy that America must be prepared to take the shock of the first blow, roll with the punch and then, and then only, strike back. That first blow will not destroy America's will to fight back, but it can destroy our ability to do so," Bracken said.

The ROA head said the Korean situation underlined more than ever before the need for a strong reserve force. He said this was America's "secret weapon," but that it could not be realized when the reserve received only $700,000 in the defense budget, compared to 14 billion dollars for "the regulars."

He pointed out that the reserves constituted a ration of 20 to 1 in the last war and that they should be in top condition since "there may not be time to get men ready in the next war."

Bracken urged increased interest and appropriations for the reserves, arguing that Russia of today is like the Germany of 1939, "a mad dog" that must be "quarantined economically and militarily if our way of life is to be continued."

The desire for greater participation in the Nation's defense preparations was voiced in most of the convention's meetings.

At an afternoon meeting of the Air Force section of the Association, several reserve officers jumped on top Air Force officials for failing to provide what they termed adequate training and facilities for reserves.

Brig. Gen. Thomas O. Hardin, chief, Reserve Section, and Major Gen. Earl Hoag, special assistant to the Air Force Chief of Staff, defended the present program as all that was possible under funds limited by Congress.

Earlier, Col. Charles W. Skeele, air vice president of the association, in his annual report was even more pointed. He noted:

In the field, all is not rosy. No training material, no equipment, no concrete or detailed program of training have reached down to the great mass of Air Reservists. They want a program of training.

"For a number of years past, we have been promised this and that by our military establishment. We have seen budgets approved by the Congress with Reserve funds included, only to find that the services have later appropriated these funds for uses as they saw fit.

"We have constantly had to fight factions in the military establishment at very high levels who are very frank in saying they have little or no use for the Reserves, especially after a few years of service or after they attain a rank higher than captain," Skeele charged.

Col. John E. Colman, national vice president for army affairs, complained that "maximum age-in-grade restrictions" had reduced the ranks of the reserves, in effect contradicting stated policies that "any mobilization will be so total that we will need the services of all experienced people."

Report Is Planned In Loyalty Probe

By the United Press

A Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee overrode Republican objections yesterday and voted 3 to 2 to draft a report on the 4-month-old Communist investigation touched off by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.).

Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Mo.) said the document will be an interim report, and that it does not mean the subcommittee has decided "to terminate our work." But GOP members thought otherwise.

Earlier, the subcommittee unanimously approved contempt of Congress citations against three witnesses — ex-Communist boss Earl Browder, leftist millionaire Frederick Vanderbilt Field, and former Amerasia Magazine editor Philip J. Jaffe, all of New York.

1,500,000-Word Transcript

Tydings said the report will be based on 1,500,000 words of testimony dealing with the 1945 Amerasia stolen secrets case and McCarthy's charges that the State Departmentd is riddled with Communists and "bad security risks."

He hoped "every single solitary word" of the voluminous record could be made public in the report.

McCarthy said he has no intention of dropping the Reds-in-Government issue regardless of what the subcommittee does.

"If it means the windup of that whitewash operation, it is good news for the country," he said. "It leaves the way open for another committee that is interested in investigating Communists instead of those exposing Communists."

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Ia.), said he and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. (R., Mass.), vigorously opposed the proposal, but were outvoted.

He challenged Tydings' statement that merely an "interim" report is planned and said the record of the closed session "will show that it is a report upon which conclusions can be based."

Staff at Work on It

Tydings said Committee Counsel Edward P. Morgan and his staff had been instructed to begin work at once on a tentative draft of the report. But he emphasized that "there may be objections or changes" before a final draft is agreed upon.

Browder, Jaffe and Field all refused to answer subcommittee questions on the ground their replies might be self-incriminating.

The contempt citations require approval by the full Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the Senate itself, before being sent to the Justice Department for prosecution. If convicted, the witnesses face up to one year in jail and a $1000 fine.

A congressional source reported meanwhile that the State Department's loyalty board will examine the subcommittee's records before handing down a decision on charges against career diplomat John Stewart Service.

The informant said the loyalty board had "reached a conclusion" on the basis of its own hearings into Service's loyalty, but decided to withhold final judgment until it can study testimony taken by the subcommittee.

Contempt Case Ruling Due

Eight of ten Hollywood writers charged with contempt of Congress may learn their fate today.

Federal District Judge Richmond B. Keech indicated, after an hour's hearing yesterday, that he might reach a decision in the cases of Herbert Biberman and Edward Dmytryk by noon.

Decisions on similar charges involving Ring Lardner, Jr., Lester Cole, Adrian Scott, Samuel Ornitz, Albert Maltz and Alvah Bessie, also are expected tomorrow from Federal District Judges Edward M. Curran and David A. Pine.

Only two of the ten involved in charges arising from the 1947 Reds-in-Hollywood investigation have been tried for refusing to tell the House Un-American Activities Committee whether they were Communists.

The two, Dalton Trumbo and John Howard Lawson, were fined $1000 each and sentenced to a year in jail. Their convictions are being appealed.

Admiral Berkey, Pentagon Critic, Retired

Vice Admiral Russell S. Berkey, chief of Navy information, and until last March commander of the Seventh Fleet in the Far East, is being retired for physical disability, it was learned last night.

Rear Admiral Hugh H. Goodwin, 49, who is both a flier and a submariner, has been named acting director of the Navy's public relations in his stead. He will take over the post this morning.

Goodwin, now a member of the Navy Board, lives at 7217 Wilson line, Bethesda. Until recently, he was chief of staff of the Atlantic Fleet. While in that job, he got into the news by declaring he wanted to "stand up and be counted" in support of the criticism of top Pentagon policies voiced by Vice Admiral Gerald Bogan, Admiral Louis Denfeld, and Capt. John G. Crommelin.

A native of Monroe, La., Goodwin served as an enlisted man with the fleet in World War I, later entering the Naval Academy. During the World War II he took part in most of the Pacific fighting from the Marianas campaign until the end of the war, while in command of the aircraft carrier Gambier Bay and later as chief of staff of Carrier Division Six and operations officer of the Philippine Sea Frontier.

Admiral Berkey, 56, commanded cruisers in much of the Pacific war and holds the Navy Cross, Navy Distinguished Service Medal, and Legion of Merit with two gold stars.

206 Bodies Recovered In Syrian Explosion

Damascus, Syria, June 7 (AP).—Rescue workers had uncovered 206 bodies today in wreckage from a fuel depot explosion near Homs, 100 miles north of Damascus.

A late count showed 382 persons injured in the blast yesterday.

EIG'S RICH, FULL-BODIED BRANDS OF KENTUCKY BOURBON MAKE...
Summertime...
MINT JULEP TIME

FROM THE DEEP SOUTH

Comes the traditional Mint Julip the romantic drink of the Southland. To balance the pungency of the mint, melting ice and sweetening, the bourbon you use in your mint julip must be rich in flavor and full bodied—this is the secret of a true mint julip. These characteristics have long distinguished Eig's exclusive brands of bourbons—distilled by native Kentuskians who for generations have produced the genuine Kentucky bourbons—that have made Kentucky bourbon and mint julips famous the world over.

KENTUCKY MINT JULEP RECIPE

KENTUCKY MINT JULEP . . . A Mint Julep should be served in a sixteen ounce glass or silver cup. Muddle gently two or three leaves of mint with half teaspoon of sugar and teaspoon of water. Fill cup with finely cracked ice. Add one jigger of any of EIG'S EXCLUSIVE BOURBONS and stir until ice has slightly melted in the cup and frost begins to appear. Fill remainder of Julep cup with ice and pour in another jigger of bourbon. Place several full sprigs of mint about five inches long—with ends cut to bleed—firmly down into the ice. Place in ice box for thorough frosting for one half hour—if you can wait that long—then sip and relax with the most romantic of famous drinks.

Allies In Korea

Britain and the Netherlands are anxious to send naval forces to join American planes and ships in the defense of Korea, and more offers are expected. The overtures should be welcomed as a means of broadening the base of resistance to Communist aggression and making it a truly United Nations affair. General MacArthur already is acting in the capacity of a United Nations commander, in view of the auspices given to the American stand. To be sure, there could not be a multitude of separate commands; there would have to be a clear understanding that General MacArthur was in charge. Also, as long as United States help is restricted to air and sea power, it probably would not be wise to commit foreign ground forces in Korea. Nonetheless, even token forces from other nations would have an important symbolic effect in showing the determination of free nations to act in concert to throw back assaults on their independence. The more other nations experience a sense of personal participation, the stronger the United Nations position will be.

Job Outlook

Last February unemployment reached a postwar peak of 4.7 million. By the end of May, although the labor force had increased by nearly 1.2 million in the interim period, unemployment had dropped to only 3 million. The Labor Department attributes this marked improvement in the employment outlook to a more than seasonal increase in job openings and to a rise in business activity that has brought the Federal Reserve Board's May index of industrial production close to the record 1948 peacetime level. The June index is expected to be even higher, and may set a new record. This is good news for the many thousands of high school and college graduates who are just entering the labor market.

A New York Times survey of 40 colleges and universities provides additional evidence that the employment outlook for newcomers is much brighter than it was 2 or 3 months ago, although conditions are spotty. Competition for jobs open to college graduates, however, is said to be keener than in preceding years, pay is lower, and employers more selective. In some fields, such as law, journalism and high school teaching, moreover, both the Labor Department and the Times say that applicants are more numerous than jobs. As a result, a substantial number of graduates of our colleges and universities will not be able to get the type of jobs for which they have received training. And, of course, untrained jobseekers will meet with increased competition from the trained groups.

Furthermore, even at present high levels of industrial activity, unemployment is still high in some parts of the country. In New York City, for example, a quarter of a million employables are reportedly looking for work. Although seasonal idleness accounts for this situation to some extent, the State Employment Service says that a good deal of idleness is attributable to labor surpluses in semiskilled lines and in a number of skilled occupations. Elsewhere, too, there are critical areas where unemployment is far above the average for the country, as in the southern New England States. Localized unemployment of this kind is a reminder that Nation-wide maximum employment cannot be insured by a generally high level of over-all industrial activity. For changes in consumer demands are constantly occurring that give rise to difficult adjustment problems in good as well as bad times. In areas where declining industries are located unemployment will assuredly become chronic, however prosperous the rest of the country may be, unless the labor force is mobile or new industries are established in the region to absorb the idle.

To sustain high levels of employment even in prosperous communities, in fact, it is essential not only to maintain a high level of production but also to increase output in order to provide additional jobs for a growing labor force. The current improvement in the job outlook does not mean that all the new jobseekers will find employment. On the contrary, there is every reason to anticipate a rise in unemployment unless or until industrial activity rises sufficiently to absorb the influx of workers. Hence the need for taking special steps to encourage more output.

In its recent report on How to Raise Real Wages the Committee for Economic Development indicated some of the ways in which an increase in output can be brought about, such as reform of the tax system to encourage risk-taking, faster replacement of capital equipment, furnishing of capital and advice to new business concerns, provision of more jobs for older people, abolishment of union make-work rules, and improvement in governmental as well as private managerial organization and methods. This many-sided program suggests sound and practicable ways and means of insuring maximum employment, together with constantly improving living standards for workers. That is a goal that cannot be reached by relying on excessive Government spending which inflates purchasing power and creates industrial maladjustments and thus defeats its objective.

Company They Keep

One of the more interesting corollaries of this Korean crisis has been a general exchange of bedfellows all over the place. To put it bluntly, the Communists have found themselves a brand new set of fellow travelers.

The party line on President Truman's announcement of a new policy in the Far East has been set forth in an editorial in the Communist Party mouthpiece, Pravda. Pravda's main point is that the President in ordering American planes and warships to support the resistance in South Korea has usurped an authority he does not rightfully possess.

> Who authorized the American Government [i. e. Mr. Truman] to take this step? In putting its armed forces into action did the United States Government reach an agreement with the United Nations on its policy about their loyalty, to which Truman and Acheson make such a display? . . . It was not the United Nations, nor any other international body, that authorized the Government of the United States to take these actions with regard to Korea and China that Truman announced yesterday.

Interestingly enough, this very same point of illegality has been raised by the Chicago Tribune and its Washington outlet. Where Pravda feels that Mr. Truman had no right to take any action about the Korean war without an explicit mandate from the Security Council (of which Russia, of course, is a member), the Tribune feels that only the Congress had the right to decide what should be done about Korea. Therefore, says the Tribune, the President's statement > is an illegal declaration of war . . . It is beside the point to say that Congress may or will back Mr. Truman. The fact is that Congress has not been consulted.

It almost seemed as if the Tribune's words were taken out of the mouth of Representative Vito Marcantonio, or vice versa. The President, asserted Mr. Marcantonio, has "usurped the powers of Congress by declaring war without its consent."

There is yet another point on which Colonel McCormick's boys in the Tribune Tower, Chicago, and Comrade Stalin's boys in the Daily Worker on East 13th st. New York, appear to agree. Both believe that Mr. Truman has been impelled by other motives than a benevolent interest in the well being of the world. The Tribune thinks Mr. Truman is rushing us into war in a desperate effort to ward off political defeat.

> Mr. Truman's thinking, if that is the word for it, is . . . confused by his own political troubles. A month ago his man, Senator Pepper, was licked in Florida, and on Saturday his man, Senator Graham, was licked in North Carolina. The Democratic Governor of Ohio said only a few days ago that he was half inclined to vote for Mr. Truman's leading Republican opponent, Senator Taft. Mr. Truman's political fortunes are ebbing. He could use a war.

The official pronouncement by the National Secretariat of the Communist Party in America, has to be sure, a slightly different version of the President's motives. He is, say the comrades, simply obeying the will of his masters in Wall Street.

> These war moves of armed intervention are only in the interest of the powerful bankers who mint their profits from the lives of the plain people here and throughout the world.

But whether Mr. Truman's motive is political panic or economic cupidity, the Tribune and the Daily Worker draw precisely the same moral. "Not one American in a thousand," says the Tribune, "believes that the defense of Korea is worth the life of a husband, a son or a brother." "The interest, the will of the American people," says the Worker, "is for peace . . . Our country, our sons, our daughters are in grave danger."

Oh, well, it all goes to prove that no matter what position you take, if you stay there long enough you'll suddenly find the comrades by your side. Nor is this the first time they have found themselves places on the bench beside the Tribune. There was also, you remember, the little interlude of the Hitler-Molotov pact. Yet it would be both sad and unjust if (applying the principle of guilt by association) people should now begin to refer to the Tribune as the prairie edition of Pravda.

T-H After Three Years

The failure of the Truman Administration to revise the Taft-Hartley Act is not an unmitigated evil. Administration of that controversial statute has now gone into its fourth year, and the country is more familiar with its provisions than when Mr. Truman hotly demanded its repeal in the 1948 campaign. Labor leaders continue to be hostile to some of its provisions, but they have also learned that some of the reforms they resisted so vehemently are an advantage to them. Employers in general are pleased to be rid of the one-sided Wagner Act, but they have also discovered some weaknesses in the T-H measure that they would like to see corrected. On the whole the controversy over the act has cooled substantially, and it seems probable that if the Eighty-second Congress gets around to revising it the debate will be less inflamed than it would have been last year.

Among the outstanding benefits of the act has been a notable decline in jurisdictional strikes. The financial accounting required of unions also has produced good results. Some labor leaders concede privately that this section of the act has had a beneficial effect on the management of unions. Their fears that unions might be harassed by damage suits have failed to materialize. In some instances, too, the union shop provision appears to have worked to the advantage of unions, although the resentment against the closed-shop provision is still strong.

What the unions seem to complain about most are the injunctions issued under the act, the provisions against secondary boycotts and mass picketing, the loosening of employers' rights of free speech, and the division of functions between the NLRB and the general counsel. In some instances, of course, these complaints are unwarranted; they stem from comparisons with the days of the Wagner Act, which, in many of its provisions, was notoriously unfair to employers and favorable to labor. No doubt labor will always feel disgruntled, for example, over the curtailment of mass picketing, even though experience has shown that mass picketing must be restrained if coercion and violence are to be avoided.

It seems to us that the strongest complaints against the act at present are related to the flimsy provisions for handling strikes that produce a national emergency and the separation of the general counsel from the board. In the one instance the people have a real complaint that their interests are not adequately protected against cessation of essential services. In the other, labor groups rightfully complain that many of their cases do not reach the NLRB, being short-circuited in the general counsel's office. If this situation persists, pressure for amendment of the act is certain to mount. General Counsel Denham's conduct may have the effect of forcing the hand of Congress. But it seems safe to assume that the experience of the last three years will dictate revision of the T-H Act rather than its repeal.

Quirino's Reaction

President Quirino of the Philippine Republic appears to have been aroused out of his lethargy by the invasion of Korea. In a statement calling upon all Filipinos "to pull together and present a united front to the dangers both inside and outside," he has acknowledged that he is concerned over the Philippines' internal situation. No doubt he was thinking more about the Communist-led Huk movement in the islands than about the corruption in his own regime. But at least he has recognized the need for a stronger internal policy in the face of active Communist aggression in the Far East.

President Truman announced yesterday that he has ordered strengthening of the United States forces in the Philippines and acceleration of military aid to the Manila government. The real danger is that the Philippine Republic will be rebuttressed at all points except its weakest one. We have frequently pointed out that the greatest peril in the Philippines comes from the corruption within the Quirino regime, which is sapping the confidence of the people. No amount of external danger is likely to restore the faith of the people in their government unless there is a genuine housecleaning that will drive the exploiters, including the President's relatives, from their positions of power.

Hickenlooper's Holdup

Senator Hickenlooper is holding up confirmation of Sumner Pike for another term on the Atomic Energy Commission. Mr. Pike is the only remaining original member of the AEC, and he has been acting chairman since David E. Lilienthal left in February. His term expires Friday. Unless the Joint Atomic Energy Committee and the Senate act before then, the commission will be deprived of his experience and will be left with only three members at a particularly crucial time in world affairs. The effect on commission morale, not to mention direction, would be devastating.

The sorriest feature of this holdup is that Senator Hickenlooper has made no public disclosure of his reasons, and there has been no hearing afforded Mr. Pike—who, incidentally, is a Republican. In other words, his nomination has been pigenholed in camera. Last year Senator Hickenlooper took up a great deal of the Senate's time with his inquisition of David Lilienthal, which turned out to be one of the fiascos of the year. Mr. Lilienthal was vindicated, but the daily questionings sapped much of his energy and undoubtedly influenced his decision to resign. The AEC—and the public service in general—cannot stand much more of this petty persecution.

This newspaper has not always agreed with Mr. Pike, but it respects him as a man of sound and independent judgment even though he sometimes is roundabout in arriving at it. He is a valuable member of the Atomic Energy Commission whose wisdom is badly needed, and Mr. Hickenlooper's colleagues have a responsibility to force the nomination into the open before the deadline. How can the President ever expect to attract and keep good men in Government if they are subjected to this sort of behind-the-scenes sniping?

Though darkness seal my eyes
And I go down in thunder like this
That rocks the world
I keep the wonder of your kiss.

Too late the lightning flash
To make a beating heart stand still;
What my heart loves
No enemy can kill.

A light burns in my heart
That you have kindled with your eyes
And light and I
Shall live till your love dies.

Southeast Asia

Recently two Senate committees gave formal approval to legislation authorizing the second-year arms aid program to nations in the general area of China. A similar 75-million-dollar fund was voted earlier this year, largely for Indo-China and Indonesia. It is likely that both the Senate and House will finally approve this second-year appropriation, particularly following the recent North Korean Communist aggression.

This is all well and good, provided the people of the United States can have the maximum assurance that the results expected, i.e., of stopping the march of communism in the southeast Asia area, will be obtained. The following are suggestions worth keeping in mind:

(1) The peoples of these areas have only experienced the Western-type imperialism; therefore, to merely talk to them about the menace of a Russian imperialism they have never experienced will be useless. What is needed is that friendly pressure be brought to bear on the leaders of the new Southeast Asian countries to preach to the masses of the ruthlessness of the Russian imperialism—as those leaders are gradually getting across the message of the Nazi and Japanese crimes committed during the recent war—by citing such examples as the mass deportations from the Baltic area to Siberia, the maltreatment by the Russians since the war of German and Japanese prisoners of war, the complete disregard by the Russians of solemnly entered-into international obligations where such disregard has suited their imperialistic ambitions.

(2) The confusing term "East-West split" used to describe the present world situation should be changed to the "Russian-Western democratic split." This is necessary for it must be recognized that Russian international communism comprises both eastern and western areas of the world.

(3) As the United States was the champion of Indonesian freedom, so should we impress upon the French the urgent necessity of immediately proclaiming a guarantee of complete independence to a nationalistic Indo-China—whether or not Bao Dai remains the new nation's leader—effective as soon as Ho Chi-minh and the Communists are defeated. The independence of such a new Indo-China should be safeguarded by the United Nations until such time as she could be admitted as a full-fledged member. W. V. G.

Georgetown Remodeling

I notice a report in your recent issues that the Progressive Citizens' Association of Georgetown is trying to get a bill through Congress defining the limits of "Old Georgetown" so that any change in building in that area would have to be approved by a commission. Even if a new building was built, its shape, style and color would have to be passed on by this commission. The first newspaper report stated that the regulation on changes would apply only to structures erected before 1850, but later reports do not mention any date.

I would like emphatically to state that any such restrictions on buildings built before or after 1850 is entirely illegal. The only restriction allowable must come under either health or safety, and even in this case the owner is allowed to use his own judgment under certain standards set up by the Health Department and the building safety code.

The courts have long held that a man's home is his castle, and that outside of making sure his structure did not endanger the health or safety of others, what form the building took was his own business.

I feel this still the same. No matter how old or young my building may be, how I fix it up, what color I paint it, or what shape it is, is still my own business. W. H. HENDRICKS.

"The Draft Assured"

I read with interest and some surprise your editorial "The Draft Assured," in your issue of June 25. You know I have a very high regard for The Washington Post. I was, therefore, quite disappointed at the factual error in the editorial with regard to my amendment to the Selective Service Act.

I did not offer an antisegregation amendment. I did not do so specifically because I believe, as your editorial indicates, that the armed forces are making good racial progress. I so stated on the floor of the Senate on June 22 and I refer you to the Congressional Record for that date.

The only amendment which I offered dealt with the protection of the personal security of all who are drafted. It was designed to protect the members of our armed forces from vigilante mob action. This in no sense can be considered a matter extraneous to the Selective Service program.

HUBERT H. HUMPHREY.
Senator from Minnesota.

Washington.

Editor's Note: Our pen slipped in describing Senator Humphrey's amendment as an anti-segregation measure. However, his proposal was introduced after the Russell "voluntary" segregation plan had been defeated, and was regarded in the Senate as a retaliatory civil rights rider. Our feeling remains that draft legislation is no place for riders of this sort.

Troops For Korea

I suggest that American troops from Japan be at once dispatched to occupy the southern extremities of the Korean peninsula—for example, as far as the rail junction of Taikyu or, somewhat further north, the junction of Taiden. These forces will thus protect the supply lines and release South Korea garrisons for the front.

Should the fighting continue to be adverse, the progress of the invaders will soon be at the price of challenging the armed power of this country; should the military situation improve, the advantages of our position are apparent.

Certainly this step has its dangers. But its risks are no greater than those with which the Soviets have already gambled. In any event we shall have affirmed our loyalty to our friends.

JOHN L. B. HIGGINS.

Insufficient Aid

The policies of our State Department are now paying off in Korea. Its most consistent policy has been to supply only economic aid and consumers goods in the Far East, the assumption apparently being that people with full bellies and leather shoes do not become Communists.

In accordance with this policy the South Korean republic has been supplied with economic aid running into several hundreds of millions of dollars. Oh yes, a few months before our troops were withdrawn from Korea, a few of the natives were organized into a constabulary and trained to combat riots and local disorders, but only a few supplies were furnished. We left the republic like a "sitting duck"—shades of Pearl Harbor.

We knew that the Red Fascists had a fully trained army in North Korea, that this army had been supplied with tanks and airplanes and we at least should have known that this army was all set to strike at the South Korean republic upon its first good opportunity.

Education And Plan 27

In the June 23 story about the proposed new department of health, education and security, your reporter made the statement that the Plan 27 to create such a department has the backing of "most of the Nation's educators."

The vast majority of the Nation's educators are committed to an independent agency for education in the Federal Government. Formal resolutions to this effect have been passed within the past year by the National Education Association, the American Association of School Administrators, the County and Rural Area Superintendents, the National Council of Chief State School Officers and the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education. The National School Boards Association representing 400,000 local school board members is also in opposition.

The latter association sent a telegram to the Dawson committee opposing Plan 27 for the record. Written protests by this Council and the American Association of School Administrators were also sent for the record. These educators realize that to embalm the present unsatisfactory situation in the Office of Education into a department makes an independent agency more remote. This explains their vigorous opposition to Plan 27.

The President of this Council, Mrs. Pearl A. Wanamaker, who is also superintendent of public instruction in the State of Washington authorized the following statement on June 23 story about the proposed new department of health, education and security, your reporter made the statement that the Plan 27 to create such a department has the backing of "most of the Nation's educators."

"Section 6 of Plan 27 would legalize and encourage in the office of the Secretary further centralization of administrative services in the fields of procurement, budgeting, accounting, library, legal and other services and activities common to the several agencies of the department, with blanket authority to the Secretary to transfer records, funds and personnel among these agencies. We object to such control of the office of education by a political officer and believe the statutory reservation of 'professional or substantive' functions to the Commissioner of Education is meaningless under these conditions.

"Our position is one of formally-adopted and long-term policy and is not based on opposition to any present official of the Federal Security Agency. We favor an agency for education in the Federal Government removed as far as possible from partisan politics in order to insure that it shall never be used for partisan political purposes."

You may be assured that a very great majority of the educators of the country are not in favor of placing education in a department of health, education and security as proposed by Reorganization Plan 27.

Sobering Up The Campus

By Malvina Lindsay

More Married Students

ARE WE SOON to see the last of commencement pictures of young men in caps and gowns surrounded by wives and babies?

The GI graduates are slowing down, even though 50 to 70 percent of this year's college graduating classes are former servicemen. This is the last big group of veterans to receive sheepskins. By next fall campuses may largely belong again to the rah rah boys and girls.

The much talked-of Federal program of scholarships for needy and promising students, for which President Truman proposed one million dollars in his budget message, is still in the realm of talk. But there is widespread feeling that there should be some kind of follow-up on the GI bill of rights.

Combine marriage and higher education on a wider scale, proposes Dr. Edwin S. Burrell, director of Cooper Union, New York. Many of those familiar with GI husband-students would echo his proposal. For married GIs, by their grades, behavior, attitudes, have raised classroom standards and matured campus atmosphere.

Dr. Burrell proposes that a system of scholarships, provided either by the Federal Government or by States, be based on school grades, marital status, and part-time earning capacity of applicants. Many college graduates now have to postpone marriage too long because of the length of professional training, Dr. Burrell points out. Sometimes higher education takes as long as 10 years. The price paid, he says, is discouragement, frustration, promiscuity. Child bearing may be deferred too long. Hence he would have promising youth given financial encouragement in marriage while getting professional training.

THE TALENTED youth of today who wants to train for a profession is pulled at from two sides. On one is his ambition to take the long road of professional training. On the other is a girl—and the strong urge to marriage, especially since this is the trend of the time and most of his associates are doing it. So often he goes "the way of all flesh." He settles down in whatever job he can get with the vague hope that "some day" he may follow his gleam. Responsibilities come and often, unless he has the drive of genius, his contribution as an outstanding scientist, educator, physician or technologist is lost to society.

But at this point one can hear the hard-headed taxpayer declaiming: Are we then to support on campuses not only every bright young man who comes along, but also his wife and a household of kids?

One might point out that payments under the GI bill of rights—to men who had already served their country—were made to a great many veterans with wives and children. Educational aid to qualified young men and women—in order that they may better serve their country in future—could with equal logic assume the facts of marriage and parenthood.

HOWEVER, those urging more combination of college and married life are not proposing any wholesale underwriting of student marriage. They feel that any scholarship program, public or private, should realistically recognize the need of earlier marriage on the part of graduate students, preparing for professions. But, as Dr. Burrell points out, part-time earning capacity as well as exceptional ability of the students to be helped would also be considered.

In fact, graduate students are showing growing determination to marry instead of to wait it out. In some cases they are being helped by parents. In others, wives are taking jobs or they are taking part-time work themselves. The last isn't easy, and with children nearly impossible. But the higher educated are evidencing the general yen for babies that has been apparent now for about a decade. Many think they should be encouraged in this.

At any rate the married student, even as an undergraduate, is definitely here. He or she has to be considered not only in scholarships but in college life of the future generally.

Hence some educators are urging that colleges offer more help to married students in housing, community services, special curriculums. More married students, they point out, will bring stability and maturity to the campus, possibly make the American college more of a center of ideas than a country club. A sobering up of the campus might also be a step toward shortening the prolonged adolescence of American youth, that the Nation with its present defense burdens and world responsibilities can ill afford.

Korean Freedom

It is obvious that the current Russian move in Korea has an almost deadly parallel to the acts of aggression which led—ultimately—to World War II. The course open to us is to declare unequivocally that every man's freedom is our freedom and our freedom is every man's freedom, that the free world (as opposed to the slave world) stands for peace, social progress and the right to be free of the fear of aggression. Thus we can turn the Marshall Plan, Point IV and military aid into more than three disjointed planks in a jerry-built stand.

It seems totally necessary that the Russians know now that they simply cannot rock the boat.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The President's Decision

THE GOVERNMENT of the United States has worked impressively well in the Korean crisis. The President has met his great responsibility, which was to decide whether to commit American forces. He has met it without flinching and without fumbling.

Lippmann

There has been no pressure from Congress or from the public to force his hand. There has been no movement to oppose his decision. There has been a lot of partisan and factional nonsense in Washington during the past months. But confronted with a really great decision, everyone has realized that not only did the President have to make the decision but that only he had access to the information essential to making the judgments which preceded the decision.

IT WAS necessary to know or at least to make a fair guess as to whether the South Korean government was or was not undermined: whether its troops would stand and whether its civilian officials would remain loyal, assuming assistance could be given to deprive the northern forces of their armor, their airplanes and their amphibious landing craft. Only the Government has sufficient information to make any kind of guess. There was not sufficient journalistic news from Korea on which the Congress or the press could have formed a responsible opinion. It was necessary to know also just what American sea and air forces could be brought to bear and how soon. That information is obviously secret.

In making his decision, the President did not, however, need to be sure that the American intervention would be a certain success. He needed only to be sure that if the Americans went into Korea, there would be no doubt in anyone's mind that they had been in Korea. Assuming that the necessary forces are available to do an effective work, we were bound to act. Our commitments to the Seoul government, reaffirmed most solemnly by Mr. Dulles less than a week before the attack, demanded that we do something more than send in arms and take out the Americans.

Moreover, the attack is a naked act of aggression, unequivocally and unambiguously a defiance of the United Nations. To accept this aggression passively would have been fatal to its authority and its influence. If a wretched little satellite government in northern Korea can thumb its nose at the United Nations, then all hope would be lost that through that universal society the nations of Asia and the nations of Europe and the Americas can find a way to work together.

THE KOREAN aggression is a reason, and not merely a good pretext, for interposing the United States Navy in order to isolate Formosa from Communist China. We can always be glad that we were not the first to use armed intervention in the Far East. But now that force is being used to upset the existing balance of power, force must be used to right it again. Though neither Korea nor Formosa is of overriding strategic importance, Formosa is more important than Korea.

By keeping the Communists from attacking Formosa and by keeping Chiang from attacking the Chinese mainland, we kill two birds with one stone—we withhold Formosa from Communist control and we impose what amounts to a truce in the Chinese civil war.

BUT WHILE the President made his decision rightly in the circumstances, the American position in the Far East is very difficult. A measure of the difficulties is that in the disputed areas—China, Korea, Formosa, Indo-China, Malaya—Soviet influence and power have expanded without the armed forces of the USSR being committed. On the other hand, nowhere on the mainland of far eastern Asia has communism been contained except by committing French, British or American forces.

The expansion of the Communist orbit is being carried out by Asiatic forces. The containment of communism involves everywhere European or American forces. Nowhere have the Asiatic anti-Communists, even with Western backing, been able to withstand the Asiatic Communists with their Russian backing. Always it is necessary for the Westerners to participate in the fighting itself. Never yet has it been necessary for the Russians to do that.

This is on many counts a profoundly disturbing contrast between the Soviet and the Western position in Asia. It does not augur well for the idea that a "line" just off the coast of Asia can be established as a permanent American military frontier. That line would have to be based on countries teeming with impoverished and restless Asiatic peoples.

We have yet to prove that we can find allies in the Far East who are a match for the satellites of Russia. Yet unless our present position in the Asiatic Far East can be held in large measure by the will and the native force of Asiatic peoples, ever larger bodies of American troops will become frozen there. Then the advantages of holding these positions will—in view of our global interests—have to be weighed against the heavy liabilities.

ington, resigned Commerce Department official, who has been indicted by a New York Federal grand jury for perjury.

In her testimony, Miss Bentley refers to a conversation with Remington in which Remington said that Hinckley—in Miss Bentley's words—"'is still a very good Communist and so is his wife. That is why they have suffered.'"

Hinckley yesterday said he does not intend to fight the House Un-American Committee or the action of School Superintendent Edwin C. Broome in firing him last Friday.

Apparently resigned to life on Sycamore Hollow, his 200-acre "paying" farm near Germantown in Montgomery County, Hinckley said he would discourage any incipient student movement at Montgomery Blair High to have him reinstated.

Hinckley has taught eleventh grade English at the high school for three years. For a year before that he taught psychology at the Montgomery County Junior College.

The Hinckleys, married in 1933, have a son and daughter.

"I'm no Red and everybody around here knows it," he told a reporter of The Washington Post yesterday morning, when the story first broke.

"I don't want to be a hero. I just want to be let alone. You can't win against them (the House Committee)."

In the afternoon, replying to most other questions with a calm, well-modulated "no comment," Hinckley added:

"All I'm interested in now is getting my hay in."

As for his admitted "social" contact with Remington, Hinckley said:

"He moved to Virginia and I moved to Maryland, and I simply got out of touch with him."

Hinckley's testimony—given June 8—occupies 11 pages of transcript. It was made before Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.), who said he was designated as a subcommittee of one to hear the testimony. Representative John McSweeney (D., Ohio), another committee member, sat in part of the time.

To counsel Tavenner's questions, Hinckley said he had been a member of two organizations—the American Youth Congress, of which Hinckley said he was chairman for four years in the thirties, and the American League Against War and Fascism.

Both groups have been listed as subversive and Communistic by the Attorney General in 1947 and 1948.

Hinckley said he "believed"—"I am pretty sure"—that he was a member of a third organization (on the subversive and Communist list also), the National Committee of the American League for Peace and Democracy.

After Hinckley refused to testify to what "other organizations" he belonged to, Tavenner demanded:

"Mr. Hinckley, I have asked you the pointed question of whether or not you have ever been a member of the Communist Party. If I have not asked that specific question, I will ask it now. Are you now or have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?"

Hinckley: "I refuse to answer that question for the reason that my answer might tend to incriminate me."

Tavenner: "You recall, do you not, when you testified before the committee (in) 1939, you denied having been a member of the Communist Party?"

[This referred to testimony before the old Dies Committee, predecessor of the current Un-American Activities group. A witness had charged that Hinckley was a Communist. Denying the accusation then, Hinckley asserted: "That is not true. We have denied it. I would like to deny it here under oath."]

But Hinckley told Tavenner and the committee that he did not recall this answer. Tavenner referred to the answer.

Tavenner: "Does that refresh your recollection?"

Hinckley (after consulting his attorney): "I think I did so testify."

Tavenner: "Has anything occurred since (1939) which would make your answer different?"

Hinckley (after again consulting his attorney): "I refuse to answer that question for the reason that my answer might tend to incriminate me."

Hinckley's friendships, particularly with Remington, his background, the jobs he has held—all these came in for questioning.

Born in Yankton, S. Dak., he attended schools in St. Joseph, Mo., took a master's degree at Columbia University's Teachers College and has taken "a few courses" at George Washington University.

He has held Government jobs briefly in the Treasury Department and the Railroad Retirement Board. He spent two years writing a handbook of college-entrance requirements for the United States Office of Education.

From 1942 to 1946, he was an assistant director of personnel for the American Red Cross. (The Red Cross said he was dismissed, after satisfactory work, when the organization's staff was cut.)

His acquaintance with Remington, said Hinckley, began "after I came to Washington. This was in 1940." The two had seen each other "socially," Hinckley explained, for a year and a half to two.

Tavenner: "Mr. Hinckley, did you know William Walter Remington to be a member of the Communist Party?"

Hinckley: "Not to my knowledge."

Hinkley said he knew Lauchlin Currie, former assistant to President Truman. He had, in fact, attended "a social meeting of friends of Mrs. Roosevelt" at the White House at which Currie led a discussion on China.

But the teacher denied knowing a long list of persons, some of them overtly connected with party activities or party utterances.

Mrs. Hinckley refused to answer questions concerning whether: (1) she knew Miss Bentley; (2) had attended any meetings of a Communist cell at Columbia; (3) is or has ever been a member of the Communist Party.

Daryl W. Shaw, principal of Montgomery Blair High, said he had "never seen anything out of the way" in Hinckley's work.

H. Stanley Stein, former president of the board of education and current board member, said the situation concerning Hinckley and the entire question of loyalty probably will be discussed at a board meeting July 11.

D. C. Rent Action Seen Today

"Without objection the report is adopted."

Senator Cain apparently missed the rapidfire rent action, and jumped to his feet, demanding reconsideration. He said it was "not fair play" to slip the bill through, since he had a previous agreement with Kefauver to speak against the measure and request a rollcall vote.

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), Senate District Committee chairman, objected to Cain's request for another shot at the bill.

Kefauver jumped into the act as a pacifier. He confirmed his commitment to Cain, and said he was perfectly willing to have Cain speak. Upshot of the tangle was a Barkley ruling that the rent conference report would be reconsidered.

The compromise measure provides that extension of rent control beyond next January 31 must be voted by Congress. It also would de-control on Saturday non-housekeeping, furnished single rooms including those in hotels.

In a long speech before the Senate recessed last night, Cain urged that the Senate reject the rent measure as agreed to by House and Senate conferees Tuesday, chiefly on grounds that it grants one more month's protection to the District than the balance of the country will have.

Korea And Germany

By Marquis Childs

Gamble By The Kremlin

The Korean attack makes it necessary to recast American thinking on foreign policy. It puts an end, for the immediate future, to any hope that peace treaties can be written which would conclude the occupation status of American forces in Europe and in Asia.

Childs

No one can believe that the North Korean invasion occurred without the approval of Moscow. Most informed observers here think that it came on direct order of the Kremlin.

The parallel with Germany is striking. In East Germany, as in North Korea, a para-military force is being built up under the direction of Russian generals. Ostensibly a police force, reports to Berlin indicate that this army is being trained and equipped with light tanks and artillery.

Every effort is being made to insure that the uniformed Germans comprising this force are loyal Communists. But in view of Russian occupation policies, that has not proved too easy. Estimates of the size of the Russian-trained East German army vary from 30,000 to 70,000.

There seems little doubt, however, that it is today the most powerful single force in all of Germany. Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and the members of his government in Bonn have been fearful that the East German force was being prepared for the conquest of all Germany. Preparation for that conquest would be completed and in readiness for the appropriate moment after the Western allies should have withdrawn or greatly reduced their occupation force.

In view of the Korean attack, it will hardly be possible to talk any longer about peace treaties that mean the withdrawal by both sides of their respective occupation forces. Plainly, the Russians can withdraw Russian soldiers and yet leave behind an army effectively trained and equipped to carry out Russian aims. That is the reality.

Moscow announced the withdrawal of Russian troops from North Korea as a completed fact in December of 1948. But the United Nations Commission stationed in Korea to make sure that the terms of the U. N. resolution on Korea's independence were being carried out was denied access to the Russian zone.

Withdrawal of United States troops from South Korea was completed in June of 1949. This fact was verified by the United Nations Commission and a report sent to U. N. headquarters at Lake Success.

The position of American troops in South Korea—at one time more than 50,000—was extremely vulnerable. The tip of the Korean peninsula is difficult to defend and almost impossible to supply. So withdrawal, in accord with the U. N. resolution, fitted in with American policy. The small training force consisting mostly of officers at Seoul remaining there by request of the government of South Korea.

The pressure from Seoul has all along been for a larger training force and for more military and economic aid. Early in this session of Congress, Republicans in the House, joined by some Democrats, killed an Administration request for 150 million dollars for South Korea.

This action had a dismaying effect in Seoul. It seemed to spell the end of American interest in the struggling republic that had come into being thanks in no small part to American help and advice. For a time members of the Economic Co-operation Administration mission in Seoul believed they would have to return to Washington since the House action had chopped them off the pay roll and had ended their function.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson and President Truman both made urgent personal pleas for a reversal. So did influential Republicans. Twenty-one days later the House voted economic aid to Korea of 120 million dollars.

As so often in the past, the real motives of the men in the Kremlin become, in the Churchillian phrase, "a mystery wrapped in an enigma." The only possible conclusion is that the southern tip of the Korean Peninsula looms so large in strategic planning that Moscow is willing to take all risks in acquiring it. And it should never be forgotten that Korea has played an important part in Russian imperialist planning for at least 50 years. Toward the end of the last century czarist plans for Korean penetration and infiltration were pushed with great zeal. They were brought to an end by the Russian defeat in the war with Japan.

The Soviets must have realized that one of the risks was to alert opinion in the United States to the danger of withdrawing American troops from Germany and Japan. Yet, with the far greater stake of the future of occupation status in Germany and Japan, Moscow was willing to take the risk.

The New Look In Car Tokens

Transit Fare Goes to 15c

tion asked the PUC to hold the Capital Transit fare increase to a minimum necessary to "assure the company financial integrity."

The three-cent school fare, established by Act of Congress in 1933, remains unchanged. But the PUC indicated it felt this should be increased. Said the commission: "It is apparent that this fare does not compensate the company for the cost of service rendered and imposes an undue burden upon other users of the service."

Riders may use existing tokens until August 15, the PUC stated, by paying two cents extra for each ride. After July 16, old tokens may be redeemed at their cash value at Capital Transit offices.

Anticipating the increase in token fares, the company has laid in a supply of five million new ones bought three months ago at a cost of $30,500, Giddings said.

The company was gambling that an increase would be ordered, Giddings explained. "We decided it would be better to take the risk of buying them ahead than to be caught without them if an increase were granted."

The new tokens will be silver in color with a crossbar across the hole in the center, Giddings said. Tokens now in use are copper colored with a "W" in the center.

The PUC summed up its findings and conclusions in this way:

(1) Present rates are not sufficient to maintain the company in sound financial condition. But it is important not to price the company out of business by increasing fares to a point where the public will stop riding streetcars and buses.

(2) The weekly pass provides a "convenient and accepted form of fare" and its use tends to speed service. Despite a steady drop in weekly pass sales since 1947 from 190,000 to 90,000, this source represents more than one-third total passenger revenues.

(3) Tokens should be sold in lots of three instead of six. The PUC felt that if riders were forced to buy six at once—even though the unit cost remained the same—a substantial shift from token to cash fares would result. This, said the PUC, would place "a disproportionate burden upon a substantial segment of present users of tokens."

(4) Existing relationship between the three types of fares should be maintained to distribute the effect of the increase equitably among users of the different types of fares.

Capital Transit applied for the rate increase last January 11, painting a gloomy financial picture and asking the higher rates be approved immediately without a hearing.

This is the third increase the company has been granted since the war. In May, 1947, the PUC eliminated tokens, increased cost of the pass from $1.25 to $1.50 and kept the 10-cent cash fare unchanged. Present fares were set in October, 1948.

When the Capital Transit Co. was formed by the merger of two other companies in 1933, fares were 10 cents cash, four tokens for 30 cents, $1 for a streetcar or feeder bus line pass, and $1.25 for a "universal" pass good on all lines. In 1914 you could buy six rides for a quarter.

Talmadge Ahead in Unit Vote

Atlanta, June 28 (U.P.). — Gov. Herman Talmadge, seeking a new four-year term, pulled ahead in all-important county unit votes tonight but waged a close popular vote battle with his old foe, M. E. Thompson, in returns from the Democratic primary.

Returns from 309 of the State's 1734 precincts gave Talmadge 38,337 popular votes with 180 indicated unit votes. Thompson had 42,891 popular votes with 90 indicated units. Three minor candidates were getting only scattered votes.

The majority candidate in each county gets its units—two, four or six graded according to population. A majority of 206 units is required for nomination, which means election in Georgia.

Senator Walter F. George, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, was outdistancing his challenger, Atlanta Attorney Alex McLennan.

Returns from 127 precincts gave George 13,524 popular votes and 142 indicated unit votes to 2687 popular votes and no units for McLennan.

Four incumbent Congressmen whose jobs were challenged held leads in the early counting. They were Representatives John S. Wood, W. M. (Don) Wheeler, Eugene Cox and James C. Davis.

In a close race for retiring Representative Steve Pace's Third District Seat E. L. Forrester led Frank Myers in the early counting.

R. O. C. Candidates Lead in North Dakota

Fargo, N. Dak., June 28 (A.P.).—Candidates heading the Republican Organizing Committee ticket increased their leads today in late returns from yesterday's North Dakota Republican primary election.

The R. O. C. faction piled up substantial margins in the city precincts and suffered few inroads as reports came in from country district where the rival Non-Partisan League usually runs well ahead.

The vote in 1580 of the State's 2298 precincts:

For United States Senator—Senator Milton R. Young, supported by the R. O. C., 73,467; T. H. H. Thoresen, backed by the league, 29,609.

The vote in 1459 precincts:

For Congress (two to be nominated by the State at large)—Governor Fred G. Aandahl, R. O. C., 69,233; Representative Usher Burdick, League, 49,164; Martin Sentehjem, League, 31,067.

For Governor—State Senator Norman Brunsdale, R. O. C., 59,989; Frank Vogel, League, 35,799.

Nip-and-tuck races were being run in two of three Democratic contests.

The vote in 944 precincts:

For Governor—Mayor C. G. Byerly of Mandan, 6909; Obed Wyum, 7021. Wyum had the Democratic Party's convention indorsement.

For United States Senator—Harry O'Brien, 11,211; Joe Kylonen, 2800.

For Congress (two to be nominated)—Ervin Schumacher, 10,162; E. A. Johansson, 5856; Mayor Edgar Agnew of Dickinson, 5412.

Postal People Lie To Retain Funds, Chamber Charges

The Council of State Chambers of Commerce yesterday accused postmasters and postal employes of lying and exaggerating to prevent a cut in their appropriations.

The charge was made in connection with a study made for the council on efforts to cut the Postoffice Department deficit.

Recalling that Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson ordered reductions in service after the House cut the budget requests by 28 million dollars, the study declared that they were "minor reductions in services, some of them long recognized as overdue."

But, the study added, the action was "seized upon by postmasters and postal employes' groups as an excuse to promote a pressure campaign" . . . which, it charged, included, "dire warnings—often exaggerated—of the inconveniences."

The study concluded that the appropriation cut should stick, postal rates should be raised, and the department reorganized as recommended by the Hoover Commission.

'Acerbic Puck'

Travail of the Rabbit Flesher Is Chronicled by NLRB

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Comes now the sad but moral story of the "acerbic Puck," the terrible-tempered rabbit flesher, whose language brought blushes to the cheek and footnotes to the report of a Labor Board trial examiner.

It is the saga of a Samuel Tandiorio, who fleshed the rabbits for the Queens-Premier-Williams Fur Dressing Corp., of Brooklyn, N. Y., and who flayed the hides of his fellow employes in the Lamb and Rabbit Local of the International Fur and Leather Workers Union, CIO.

It is duly chronicled, more in sorrow than in anger, and with omissions and explanatory footnotes rendered necessary by canons of good taste and U. S. Postal Regulations—in the intermediate report of NLRB Trial Examiner Charles W. Schneider.

In the first place, as one of Schneider's footnotes wistfully complains, it is a little difficult to find out exactly what happened. It seems that various witnesses "were not adept in the use of the English language and their narrative powers were not always equal to the task of conveying precise meaning in that idiom." In short, they didn't talk so good.

But, as clearly as can be determined, we have a picture of Tandiorio busily fleshing rabbits together with some 20 coworkers in the rabbit fleshing department of the Q-P-W Fur Dressing Corp. He was a union member of good standing and, indeed, one time he was the union's business agent.

But by 1948 he had been replaced in that position of honor and gain by one Michael Hudyma, whom Tandiorio considered, even in his kindest moments, to be less than tolerable.

Whereas many of the older employes considered Samuel as "an acerbic Puck, whom they hoped that time would ultimately mellow," time did no such thing.

In fact, Samuel's dislike of Michael Hudyma, and his subsequent dislike of the union for replacing him as business agent, led him publicly to use locutions that were "often more than merely derogatory."

Indeed, Trial Examiner Schneider was obliged to observe, "In an industry not distinguished . . . for decorous language, his manner of expression was sufficiently colorful to warrant describing it as being extravagantly obscene."

Schneider does the best he can to illustrate the point, by citing snatches of Tandiorio's comments, with the proper number of dashes and a series of helpful footnotes to illustrate the nature, content, and general area of the epithets and adjectives used.

So unpleasant were these comments, directed at the union in general and its new business agent in particular, that Samuel's fellow-workers were deeply shocked and offended. They said they would not work with him any more. But union officers, including the be-epitheted Hudyma, were models of restraint. Again and again they counseled forebearance.

But—to make a long and rough story short and chaste—the payoff came when Tandiorio declined to pay off. He refused to sign a check off paper, authorizing the company to deduct his union dues from his wages.

This, plus other things, left the men, Schneider discovered, "in an ugly mood." They said a couple of footnotes themselves, and refused to work. Ultimately, the company fired the acerbic Puck and the men then went back to work.

More acerbic than Puckish, Tandiorio filed a complaint with the NLRB that the union committed an unfair labor practice against him. Schneider, hearing the case, decided no law was violated: Tandiorio was sacked because of his behavior, not because he refused to sign a checkoff or to belong to the union.

City Council Corrects Traffic Ticket Error

Johnstown, Pa., June 28 (AP).—It takes a resolution by City Council to get back a $1 traffic fine—even one the city collected in error.

George R. Belin found a traffic ticket on his car. He paid his fine and returned to the car to discover it wasn't his auto after all. Just one that looked like his.

Traffic officials couldn't return the fine. It had to be done by a Council resolution.

Far East Crisis May Alter Plans of Senate Crime Investigators

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The uncertain international situation threatens to disrupt plans of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee for a series of hearings next month in various parts of the country.

Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said yesterday that subpenas have been issued in Miami for a number of witnesses to hold themselves ready to testify at a public hearing which the committee had planned there. But he told reporters it now may be difficult for Senators to leave Washington and plans are subject to delay or change. The Miami hearing may be moved here, he added.

Committee Counsel Rudolph Halley said the subpenas were issued just so those on whom they were served wouldn't get the idea of taking a trip at this time. No names were made public.

Treasury Officials Heard

The committee yesterday heard Treasury Department officials, headed by Undersecretary Edward H. Foley, jr. Here are highlights of their testimony:

Foley—Prosecution for income tax law violations "is not always a suitable device for reaching major criminal figures" because today's gangsters and racketeers have "learned a tax lesson" from their predecessors who were sent to jail for evasion.

Narcotics Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger—"Organizations of interstate racketeers are the underground railway over which passes crime of all sorts in this country." Major racketeers in narcotics keep as far as possible from overt participation and frequently have many other illegal activities. He called for establishment of "a gallery of major interstate racketeers" because their operations often "are so diverse and so extensive geographically that few individual local officers can comprehend their magnitude . . ."

(Kefauver said he approved of this idea. Treasury officials said they do obtain information from the FBI but what they want is a list for circularization to local officials similar to a "watch list" of narcotics suspects now published in booklet form.)

"Insulated" on Tax Returns

Internal Revenue Commissioner George J. Schoeneman, whose statement was read by Daniel Bolich, assistant commissioner. In the past five years some 3000 tax fraud cases were referred to the Justice Department for prosecution and 10 percent of them involved "members of the criminal element." Bolich said about $400,000 was paid out last year to informers. Today's racketeers attempt to insulate themselves from tax prosecution "by operating through a maze of corporations, dummy stockholders and fronts," making successful prosecution extremely difficult.

In reply to questions, Bolich said it is difficult to "go behind" income tax statements as to sources of revenue. Halley said the committee has seen one tax return on which a $200,000 expense item was listed as "replenishment of bankroll" at a gambling spot. The case is under investigation, Kefauver added.

Dwight E. Avis, assistant commissioner of the alcohol tax unit—because underworld characters are having trouble finding war souvenir guns, they are "purchasing shotguns and sawing off the barrels with the intent of using them in the commission of violent crimes."

Secret Service Chief U. E. Baughman—Despite reports that big gambling money has been behind counterfeiters, investigations have failed to prove it. Occasionally the business is run on a syndicate basis, but usually it is operated by "small independent groups."

Most of the officials said their units were undermanned in the face of big enforcement jobs.

Other witnesses were Assistant Customs Commissioner David B. Strubinger and Treasury Enforcement Coordinator James J. Maloney.

Meanwhile, the House Interstate Commerce Committee was to meet at 10 a. m. today in closed session to complete action on the Senate-approved bill to ban interstate shipment of slot machines.

Happy Is The Day When Backache Goes Away . . . .

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

'Mercy Death' Doctor Restored to Practice

Concord, N. H., June 28 (U.P.)—Dr. Hermann N. Sander, acquitted of murdering a patient, won back his right to practice medicine today. The New Hampshire Board of Registration in Medicine unanimously voted to reinstate immediately the medical license it took from Sander April 19.

"That's good news," Sander said at his home in Candia. He said he would resume practice within a few days.

The board revoked Sander's license because he could not explain satisfactorily why he injected air into the veins of Mrs. Abbie C. Borroto, a cancer patient.

The State put Sander on trial for first-degree murder, charging the injection of air had killed the 59-year-old woman. The State charged he was motivated by a desire to end Mrs. Borroto's suffering.

For Sander, now 42 years old, the board's decision was a new lease on life. He was heavily in debt from expenses incurred in defending himself and at one time plowed neighbors' fields for money to keep his family together.

But whether he will be able to resume his full practice still is in doubt. He was barred from practicing at some hospitals after the trial.

Asked how he planned to cope with this, Sander said:

"I'm just going to practice in my office for the time being."

Friends said they believe Sander's office practice would be about the same as it was before he went on trial.

LICENSE RESTORED—Dr. Hermann N. Sander relaxes with his wife in the garden of their home after receiving notice yesterday that the New Hampshire Board of Registration in Medicine had restored his license to practice. New Mystery Arises in 1947 Murder of May Couple

New mystery was added yesterday to the 1947 slaying in Nebraska of a young Alexandria, Va., couple, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. May 2d, a double murder which authorities thought had been solved.

Charles McClelland, 21, who confessed that he killed and robbed the Mays in August, 1947, near Omaha, is serving a life sentence in the Nebraska State Penitentiary for the crime.

However, a writ of habeas corpus filed yesterday in Omaha disclosed that county officials there are questioning an Omaha man in connection with the murders.

He is Harry Shamp, 25. His identity became a matter of public record when his attorney filed the writ in District Court in Omaha in an attempt to get him released from solitary confinement in Douglas County jail.

The writ said Shamp had been "grilled and put under drugs."

Deputy County Attorney Joseph P. Enserra said the man now being questioned, who was paroled from the Oregon State Prison three days before the slayings, "neither denies nor admits the murders while not under the influence of truth serum, but he has given us very definite information while under the serum."

The Mays, both of whom were 22, had been married only six months when murder wrote finis to their lives. They lived at 1138 Valley dr., Alexandria, and were motoring to Omaha from Colorado, where they had visited friends, when they were slain.

May was the son of Beverly C. May, general manager of the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co., and grandson of the company's owner, Robert L. May.

McClelland confessed to the crime while serving a term for a bad check conviction in Colorado's Canon City State Prison. He said he shot the Mays after they picked him up as a hitchhiker. He pleaded guilty to two counts of second degree murder and received a life term.

Cavalry Dies Officially

President Truman yesterday signed a bill that musters the cavalry horse out of the Army. The Calvary is officially replaced by the Armored Branch as one of the dozen basic components of the Army.

Keeps Children

Divorce Won By Moncure In Arlington

Richard C. L. Moncure, Arlington real estate operator, has been awarded a divorce from his wife Phyllis, 31, and custody of the couple's three children.

Mrs. Moncure will not receive alimony under the decision, forwarded to attorneys by Fairfax Circuit Court Judge Arthur Sinclair, who heard the Arlington case after both local judges had disqualified themselves.

Moncure, 48, accused his wife of willful desertion and abandonment in his original suit.

Mrs. Moncure, in a cross suit, said that her husband treated her with violence, threatened her life, and also threatened to put her in a mental institution. She charged that he and his mother, with whom the couple lived for several years after their 1938 marriage, looked on her merely as an "incubator."

The children, aged 5, 9, and 10, have been living with their father and grandmother since 1945.

Alaska and Hawaii Statehood Bills Get Committee O. K.

By The Associated Press

Statehood for Hawaii and Alaska was approved by the Senate Insular Affairs Committee yesterday.

The action makes the House-passed Statehood bills eligible for Senate consideration for the first time.

Nonvoting delegates to Congress from both Territories expressed confidence that the bills will be approved, when and if they reach a Senate vote.

Both apparently will meet some opposition in the Senate. There were two dissenting votes on the Alaska bill in the Senate committee and one against Hawaii.

The committee vote on Alaska was 8 to 2; on Hawaii 9 to 1, with three Republican Senators voting "present."

Quake Rings Bells

Perpignan, France, June 28 (U.P.). An earthquake of medium intensity shook part of southern France tonight, causing church bells to ring in many towns. No casualties or damage were reported.

Sound Waves Get Blame for Blasts Heard at Dayton

Dayton, Ohio, June 28 (U.P.)—The United States Air Force at nearby Wright Field has proved that a series of unexplained "explosions" heard here were caused by sound waves of high-speed jet fighter planes bouncing off the ground with the crash of a thunderclap.

Air Force officials disclosed that diving jets had caused the "explosions" first heard in this area, April 20-21, and recently in California.

Wright Field engineers said a plane diving from a high altitude races ahead of the sound waves. When the plane pulls out, the waves continue toward the ground, where they create an explosive noise when they hit.

Officers emphasized the crashing sound waves are not dangerous.

Lustron President Says RFC Director Sought His Replacement in Firm

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

President Carl G. Strandlund of Lustron Corporation yesterday testified that Walter F. Dunham, a director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, had suggested his giving up his interest in the company.

Dunham, Strandlund told a Senate Banking and Currency subcommittee, wanted him to turn over his interest in the company so that Rex Jacobs of Detroit would be placed in control.

Jaobs made a two-day survey of the affairs of the prefabricated housing corporation and made a report on them to RFC.

Immediately after Strandlund's testimony Chairman J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) closed the afternoon session and heard the rest of Strandlund's testimony in executive session.

Meanwhile in Chicago yesterday Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan yesterday extended for two days his order preventing RFC from taking over assets of the Lustron Cooperation.

The order, issued June 8, was to expire yesterday. The extension was recommended by Wallace Streeter, referee in bankruptcy, to whom Judge Sullivan referred the case yesterday. The RFC objected to a longer extension and a hearing was set for Friday on the objections.

Under questioning by Senator Homer Capehart (R., Ind.), Strandlund acknowledged that he had paid $10,000 for the name of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) on a housing booklet. He said the corporation had made $46,000 on the sale of this and a companion booklet.

Strandlund said he didn't know and didn't care who actually prepared the booklet. So far as he knew, he said, McCarthy wrote it himself but he attended to the fact the booklet was signed by the Senator at the time he was vice-chairman of a Joint Senate-House Committee on Housing.

The Lustron president testified that McCarthy approached him with the manuscript of the booklet and said he had already received a couple of magazine offers for it. Strandlund said he took the matter up with the company's advertising department and outbid what he was informed the magazines were offering.

Strandlund said the Wisconsin Republican made no promises about legislation and did nothing to help the company. In fact, he said, McCarthy opposed a bill which would have aided Lustron.

The Lustron president, asked if he had entertained McCarthy, said he believed on one occasion he had bought the Senator a cup of coffee in the company cafeteria and that was all.

Lobby Probers Ask for Facts On Ewing Trip

By the United Press

Chairman Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.) revealed yesterday his House Lobby Investigating Committee has called on the General Accounting Office to investigate the recent European trip of Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing.

Ewing, who is plugging the Administration's compulsory health insurance program, visited England to study the British socialized medical system. Buchanan said the GAO was ordered to find out who paid for the trip and whether Ewing has been lobbying for his "so-called political medicine."

Meantime, a Civil Service Subcommittee, headed by Representative John Bell Williams (D., Miss.), accused the Federal Security Agency of tying up with the CIO to put across the Administration's health program.

The subcommittee is investigating charges of overstaffing in Federal departments.

Buckanan's group is investigating lobbying activities by a number of groups. It currently is looking into attempts by Government agencies to influence legislation.

Buchanan said his committee plans to call Assistant Secretary of State Jack McFall to explain the department's "social functions" for Congressmen. Buchanan said the parties were paid for by State Department officials, including Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

WTOP Requests Assignment of WOIC License

WTOP Inc., is owned 55 percent by The Washington Post and 45 percent by the Columbia Broadcasting Co. General Teleradio, Inc., is a subdivision of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc.

5-Month Sales Of Autos Set New Top Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Despite a dip in May, new car sales in Washington set a new all-time high for the first five months this year.

Registrations totaled 13,049, a gain of 5 percent over the 12,432 in the same 1949 period.

Titlings in May numbered 2544, according to the Washington Automotive Trade Association, a decline of 284 under the corresponding 1949 period.

Meanwhile from Detroit come reports that when auto factories close Friday they will have accounted for nearly 3,700,000 cars and trucks in the first half of the year. Passenger car production alone will go over the three-million mark for the period.

A temporary leveling off of output is expected next week due to a holiday on Tuesday. This follows three consecutive weeks of new record making in the car and truck assembly plants. Right now the record for a single week's output stands at 196,635 units, according to Ward's Automotive News, or 198,677 as estimated by Automotive News.

For the first five months this year, here is the record of new car sales in Washington as compared with the previous two years:

	1950	1949	1948
January	2134	2268	2338
February	2207	1829	1940
March	2844	2497	3200
April	3320	3010	2755
May	2544	2826	2339

COMMENT: The puzzling behavior of the stock market during the past three days earned an apt comment from Senator Flanders (R., Vt.). The market, the Senator said, "is too nervous for its own good." Flanders has been a successful manufacturer, a Federal Reserve Banker, and head of the research staff of the Committee for Economic Development. "I think," the Senator stated, "the market has lost its judgment on the thing." This same view was taken by many in Wall Street who feel that president Truman's decisive statement of this Nation's Far Eastern policy is one of the most significant post-war contributions to world peace.

LOCAL DIVIDENDS: The Hecht Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of 40 cents a common share, payable July 31/July 7 . . . Washington Gas Light Co. voted regular quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a common share, payable August 1/July 14. Also, the usual quarterly of $1.12½ on the $4.50 preferred an $1.06¼ on the $4.25 preferred, both payable August 10/July 25.

GOOD, BUT: The advertising business is good, but it should be better, says the president of the American Association of Advertising Agencies. "Last year," F. R. Gamble told a convention, "advertising expenditures exceeded five billion dollars for the first time in history." But percentagewise, he added, this is a decline from the prewar years. Before the war, ad expenditures averaged 3 percent of the national income. Last year's five billion was only 2.34 per cent.

ODD LOTS: Prices for a wide variety of stainless steel products and galvanized steel pipe were raised Tuesday by Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., American Steel & Wire Co., and the National Tube Co . . . Stockholders of National Enameling & Stamping Co. have voted to change the firm's name to Nesco, Inc . . . Directors of Celanese Corp. of America have authorized the redemption August 1 of five million dollars of the company's debentures . . . Lead price was trimmed yesterday another one-half cent a pound to 11 cents, New York basis . . . Dun & Bradstreet's wholesale food index this week climbed 8 cents to $6.04, highest level since January of 1949 . . . Stromberg-Carlson Co. introduced its new television receivers yesterday and announced prices represent a 20 to 25 percent reduction from previous models.

STORE SALES: Dollar volume of six Washington department stores improved 1 percent in May over the like 1949 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond noted yesterday. However, local sales for the first five months remained 2 percent less than in the corresponding period last year. The 95 reporting stores in the Fifth Reserve District showed a 2 percent sales upturn in May, but a 2 percent dip in the five-month period.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: E. C. Bothwell will retire Saturday as vice president and director of Gulf Oil Corp. after 35 years' service . . . Edgar Bennett, chief engineer at Charlotte, N. C., will be promoted July 1 to assistant chief engineer of the Southern Railway System at Washington. J. Floyd Beaver, superintendent at Alexandria, Va., will take over Bennett's post at Charlotte . . . Joseph A. Neff has been elected board chairman of D. A. Schulte, Inc., to succeed Louis Goldvogel who resigned after 40 years with the firm.

Dan River Mills Boosts Price of Dress Goods

New York, June 28 (AP).—Dan River Mills, one of the nation's major textile manufacturers, today increased prices on its cotton dress goods lines about five percent.

Roger S. Dempsey, merchandising manager of the company's dress goods department, said steadily mounting costs of raw materials and supplies made the increase necessary.

Seeger Net Up Sharply

Seeger refrigerator Co. reported net earnings of $3,873,368 for nine months ended May 31. This was equal to $3.52 a share, and compared with profits of $2,742,841 or $2.49 a share, for the like months the previous year.

Dry-Voiced Arden Finally Gets Man

By Richard L. Coe

EVERYONE EXPECTED Eve Arden to be amusing in the Olney's "Over 21." She is. Delightfully so.

The part of the wise, witty wife who's pushing her husband through Officer Candidate School (to spell it out, in case you've forgotten what OCS meant) is right up Eve's particular highway. It allows her to look what I assume to be the top of fashion; there's something about the way Eve wears clothes that makes you think they're pretty lucky garments. I've not the slightest doubt she could make a burlap sack and a couple of ropes look like the ultimate shout.

For this dry-voiced lady is one of our best comediennes. It is an interesting fact that she has made people like her—the superior, terribly aware female who always, somehow, loses the great Battle of Love. In so many movies she's been the best feature in sight, yet her wry intelligence always foreordains for her only a bridesmaid's role. She is the platonic secretary of the heroine's wise friend.

This is, to be sure, because of the movies' sacrosanct credo that an intelligent, attractive woman, with the presumption to have wit, can never also have the love of a True Hero. Rich, paunchy men with, presumably no Romance in their lives, are permitted to offer Miss Arden their fortunes, but such a woman, in the Hollywood picture, can never be found under the apple tree with anyone under 65.

Miss Arden's radio success as "Our Miss Brooks" also furthers this foolish assumption. Because she plays the school teacher with such winning humor, she's become a national favorite, but not a little of her sympathy comes from the fact that True Love can ne'er be hers.

Fortunately, Ruth Gordon's wartime comedy gives Miss Arden her man. Like a tiger, she fights his way for him. And though he's well over 21 and merely an intellectual, he's also under 40 and unbends his masculinity enough to clutch her and buss her when the spirit moves him, which, naturally, it does.

Brooks West has this enviable assignment and does it with the enjoyment we all feel due Miss Arden. It is a pleasing part and you'll like him in it. He last appeared here with Susan Peters at the Gayety in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." He played her young brother, Octavius, and he can take it as a compliment that I remembered him.

Donald Foster Returns

Not having seen "Over 21" before in any of its facsimiles, I was relieved to find it didn't date too badly; laughs at Army officers, despite what happens about Korea, are always welcome with me, and you'll find 'em in this middling farce. My wife, who usually yawns at seeing a play she's seen before (and, if pressed, she includes "Hamlet" in her indictment), was pleased with her second look at it, thought Miss Arden immensely superior to Author Gordon.

Outstanding in the active cast are Donald Foster, getting a hand on his first appearance here this summer as the would-be officer's selfish publisher; Bert Thorn, as a rasp-voiced movie mogul; John Becher, Wanda Lyon and Marjorie Peterson as a colonel and his family.

Harry Ellerbe directed with the emphasis on laughs and, altogether Eve's admirers will be delighted to have her back in the attractive flesh, with a man all her own.

"OVER 21." Richard Skinner and Evelyn Freeman present the comedy in three acts by Ruth Gordon. Setting by S. Syrjala. Directed by Harry Ellerbe. At the Olney Country Theater. Matinees Saturday and Sunday.

DRAMA EDITOR Ernie Schier and his wife, former Reviewer Marjorie Kelly, who both used to appear in these pages, have the latest offspring in the theater set, a son, born Tuesday night at 6 . . . Marjorie and the lad set something of a record by being home from the hospital within 4 hours; both are doing well and the newcomers' sisters, Johannan and Jennifer, now feel grown up indeed.

THURSDAY NIGHTS at the Collingswood open air theater on the Mount Vernon hwy will be Service hospital nights . . . The theater and the Red Cross are hosting hospitalized servicemen each week from Walter Reed, Bethesda, Fort Belvoir and Forest Glen.

IT'S AU REVOIR to that lively recreation center at Arlington Farms, whose stage and auditorium (flat, like Kansas) have been home to the Barter Theater and nearby amateur groups . . . JUDY SPLINTERS, that TV gal with the talkative sister, Shirley Dinsdale, will take over Saturday at the Hecht Co., downtown at 11:30 and 12:30 and at Silver Spring at 3 and 3:45 . . . The puppet declares no admish tickets will be needed.

THE APEX is going in for the sneak preview biz; you'll find "Princess O'Rourke" and an anonymous newcomer there Friday night . . . "Come as late as 8:30," wires Frank Boucher.

Cartographer Barnette to Retire Friday

Dudley P. Barnette is an authority on maps, engraving on glass negatives and use of plastics in reproduction.

Barnette

He is also an authority on the view between Baltimore and Washington—he's been looking at it almost daily since 1904.

After Friday, he will stop looking at it at least every day. On Friday he will wind up 46 years of service for the Government, and retires to his Baltimore home.

This long-time commuter reports steady train travel between Baltimore and Washington from 1904 to 1935, when he switched to automobile. Since then he has been a member of a car pool of Commerce employes living between here and Baltimore. He hasn't minded his commuting a bit, either.

As chief of the Reproduction Branch of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, Barnette, who is 68, has done much to aid cartography through research in lithographic processes.

He pioneered in processes for engraving on glass negatives and in the use of plastics in reproduction. Barnette also found a new method of preparing tints for lithographic reproduction.

Rear Admiral R. F. A. Studds, C&GS director, said the developments in the lithographic process for which Barnette is largely responsible are considered "the basis of modern lithography."

Barnette has been active both in church and Masonic work and has served as superintendent of the Sunday school of the Church of Disciples of Christ in Baltimore.

Barnette, who retires June 30, said he plans to take an extended tour of the West this summer, with stopoffs in the national parks. Then he'll settle down to raising flowers, his pet hobby.

Inspection Set Friday for Navy Air Reservists

Two thousand Naval and Marine Air Reservist "weekend warriors" and 500 full-time personnel of the Naval Air Reserve Training unit at Anacostia will stand formal inspection Friday.

The annual review will be held for the first time at the National Guard Armory for the convenience of families and friends who wish to attend.

The review will include brief talks by the head of the inspection party, Rear Admiral A. K. Doyle, USN, chief of the Naval Air Reserve, and by Brigadier General W. O. Brice, USMC, commander of the Marine Air Reserve; District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, representing the District Commissioners, and Captain G. L. Kohr, USN, commanding officer of the Anacostia NARTU.

The day's program will include inspection of the Naval Air Station's Marine detachment at 11 a. m., a press lunrheon for inspection heads at the National Press Club at noon, followed by formal review of full-time station personnel at 1:45 p. m. Station facilities will be inspected at 2:30 p. m.

Planners Issue Report on Slum Areas Today

A report on redevelopment of Washington's slum areas is expected to be made public today by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The report will be submitted by the executive committee.

The NCPPC opened its three-day session yesterday by giving approval to extension of the Rock Creek and Sligo parks and by of the Little Falls Branch Park.

Boundaries for the three additions were discussed with Blair Lee, 3d, vice chairman of the Maryland-National Capital Parks and Planning Commission. The proposals would extend the Rock Creek Parkway into Maryland above the B. & O. railroad line about a mile upstream along the Viers Mill housing project. Sligo Park would be extended above the Forest Glen rd., planning director John Nolen, jr., said.

Commission members also were given a preview of a National Park Service report, to be made to Congress, on the Potomac River Parkway. The project would use the C. & O. canal right of way in its lower portions.

Reynolds' 3-Hitter Beats Sima in Debut for Nats, 5-1

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, JUNE 28.—Perhaps you've noticed that the Red Sox have bolted into a five-game winning streak since Steve O'Neill took over from pride-hurt Joe McCarthy, who finally gave up the job. Into that sort of a turnabout, there is always the temptation to read some special significance.

Yet it's pretty preposterous to presume that the Red Sox under O'Neill are that much better a team than they were under McCarthy. Or that O'Neill's managerial genius accounts for the difference. Were that true, no ceiling could be placed on O'Neill's skill because McCarthy was towering over all other managers until this year, at least in the record book's esteem.

POVICH

What the Red Sox got chiefly was a change in managerial personalities, not in tactics. Because its only a thin line of distinction among all baseball managers when it comes to stratagems. If the Red Sox are responding to anything special, it's the kindly geniality of O'Neill as contrasted with the gruffness of McCarthy.

THERE NEVER were two more extremes among big league managers. McCarthy was the perfectionist, intolerable of mediocrity and failure, abrupt with his men. O'Neill is the jolly Irishman who doesn't take a ball game home with him. He doesn't get mad at people easily, reconciles the fact that all of his ball players are not good ones.

McCarthy had to be unhappy with the Red Sox, if only for the fact that they were losing. It didn't help his lot any that they were expected to win the pennant. More than he would confess, he was hurt by Jimmy Dykes' off-hand crack of several years ago, that he was a push-button manager.

Actually, Dykes didn't mean to take that kind of a slap at McCarthy, he later declared. He was trying to point out whenever the Yankees needed good reinforcements in any position, they had merely to call up one of their stars from Newark or Kansas City, and presto: He had no more problems.

O'NEILL'S NEW role with the Boston Club could make them a better team at that. Some of the pressure will be off the players, who were always aware of McCarthy's grimness and unlike his old, good Yankees, didn't have the latent talent to respond to his demands. O'Neill is the more patient man. He may have a more relaxed Boston team.

McCarthy had pride in his good Yankee clubs. He insisted that they act like big leaguers, even off the field. He was critical of their dress, and the archenemy of the sport shirt. He demanded his players leave proper tips. That philosophy was reflected in McCarthy's resignation, no doubt. If he couldn't have a winning ball club, he wanted no more of failure.

Nobody ever took over in a better spot than O'Neill, incidentally, and his multitude of friends are happy about the circumstances that put nice guy Steve in command of the Red Sox, at this time. He has everything to win, little to lose, no matter what happens to the Sox from now on.

THE RED SOX haven't been a good ball team all year, but the amazing thing is that with all of their inconsistencies, they are only eight games out of the lead at this point. It is easy to remember that in the last two years they came from eleven games behind to make it a finish fight on the last day of the season, before losing out.

Only the Red Sox, in fact, figure to make up anything like an eight-game margin. But with their kind of power, it is still not improbable. They could be smitten with the whole idea of a new manager and a fresh, if tardy start. Ball teams sometimes respond like that. Up to now they have been the most embarrassed club in the league with their failure to win. They could recapture some of their self esteem.

And the Red Sox need only to make a close finish of it to earn for O'Neill the label of miracle manager. Unlike McCarthy, who was down-rated when the Red Sox didn't win, O'Neill is not under the same compulsion to take the pennant. Nice Steve is in a nice spot.

Sain Posts Tenth Victory, Beats Phils for Braves, 3-1

Boston, June 28 (AP).—Johnny Sain became the first National Leaguer to pitch 10 victories tonight as the Boston Braves whipped Philadelphia, 3-1, and knocked the Phillies back into second place.

The Phils outhit the Tribesmen 8-5 but the locals bunched two of theirs with a pair of walks and an error for all their runs in the third inning.

Russ Meyer, who went the first six innings, suffered his seventh defeat, his second to the Braves. The former Cub righthander has won only two games. Sain, who has lost five games, didn't win his 10th in the Braves' pennant winning year of 1948 until July 1. That season Sain won 24 games.

Sain walked only one of the Phils and struck out three.

Dodgers Regain Lead

Hermanski's Homer Beats Giants, 5 to 3

Brooklyn, June 28 (AP).—Gene Hermanski's first home run of the year broke a deadlock between Preacher Roe and Sheldon Jones in the seventh inning and gave Brooklyn a 5-3 victory over New York today.

The victory enabled the Dodgers to regain the National League lead. The Phillies, beaten by the Braves, now are a half-game behind.

Brooklyn outfielder Carl Furillo was beaned by Jones in the eighth inning and was carried off the field on a stretcher. Pending the development of X-rays at Swedish Hospital, the Dodger rightfielder is not believed to be seriously injured. However, he has a bump behind the right ear.

Furillo has been hitting .500 since the Brooks returned home and in his two previous trips to the plate he banged out a two-run homer and a single.

Wolff Donates Profits to Kids

Royalties from sales of the Bob Wolff Official Scorebook will go to the Boys' Club of Washington and the Junior Police and Citizens' Corps, the author announced last night.

Wolff has broadcast and televised the Nats' home and road games for the last two years. His scorebook has just been published and contains pictures of the Washington team in addition to 22 box score blanks.

Welsh, Lynch Doubles Champs

Barney Welsh and Hugh Lynch defeated Fred McNair and Bill Gifford, 3—6, 6—4, 6—4, 6—3, in a best-of-five sets for the Washington doubles championship yesterday at Edgemoor Country Club.

Girls Lead Yank Gains In Tennis

Wimbledon, June 28 (AP).—A crowd of 25,000, looking for surprises but finding few, turned out for the all-England lawn tennis championships today and watched the United States glamour gals continue their sweep into the third round.

Doris Hart of Jacksonville, Fla., a darling of the galleries, was one of five United States women players advancing into the third round.

Seeded third, Miss Hart easily put aside Mrs. Betty Sanden of Sweden, 6-1, 6-0.

Joining her in the third round in what was one of the minor surprises of the day was Nancy Chafee, the Los Angeles beauty, who ousted Mrs. Helen Ribhany of Boston, 6-1, 6-3. Mrs. Ribhany was one of last year's semifinalists.

Dorothy Head of Alameda, Calif., Barbara Scofield of San Francisco, and Mrs. Pat Todd, fourth seeded from La Jolla, Calif., also advanced to join five other American girls who got to the third round yesterday.

The varied menu today included mixed doubles, men's doubles and the smattering of women's singles. Form prevailed almost without exception, much to the disappointment of the crowd—largest to attend since the affair opened Monday.

The U. S. collided head-on with Australia for the first time and came off second best in men's doubles.

In the outstanding match of a pretty dull afternoon the young combination of Mervyn Rose and George Worthington trounced two of America's best newcomers—Vic Seixas of Philadelphia and Fred Kovaleski of Detroit—in straight sets in a first round doubles match, 6—3, 6—4, 8—6.

It looked briefly as if Rose would figure in two center courts upsets as he partnered Britain's Kay Tuckey in a furious mixed doubles tussle against Bill Talbert of New York and Mrs. Margaret Osborne duPont of Wilmington, Del. The Americans squeezed out 6—4, 3—6, 6—3.

Talbert, playing with Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, disposed of Guy Delhomme and Jacques Sanglier of France, 6—1, 6—1, 6—0, in the men's doubles.

Tomorrow brings back the men's singles with a full third round program which will cut the field to 16.

Rojek's Double Wins for Bucs

Pittsburgh, June 28 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates rallied for two runs in the eighth tonight to edge the Cincinnati Reds, 6-5, before a crowd of 12,040. They payoff blow was Stan Rojek's run-scoring double with two men out.

Cochell Heads Topnotch Field For Mid-Atlantic Tennis Meet

By Gordon Beard

EARL COCHELL, the Nation's seventh-ranking tennis player, will appear in the annual Middle Atlantic Sectional Tennis Championships at Kenwood Golf and Country Club July 8-16.

The colorful Californian will be accompanied by three other top-ranking netmen, Hugh Stewart, No. 17, Arnold Saul, No. 19, and Straight Clark, No. 21, also from California.

New York's Sidney Schwartz, ranked twenty-fourth, and Baltimore's Larry Dee, twice national intercollegiate doubles champion, also have agreed to appear.

The list of local entries is topped by Gil Bogley, national junior singles and doubles champion last year, and Lieut. Charles Oliver, runner-up in the 1949 Mid-Atlantic.

Striving to make the field the best ever assembled on a local court, Alphonso Smith, chairman of the Kenwood tennis committee, has also received committments from Ricardo Balbiers, national champion of Chile and runner-up in the United States Intercollegiates last week.

Magda Rurac, ten times champion of Roumania and now ranked eleventh in this country, heads the list of women entries. Thirteenth-ranking Baba Lewis of Boston, and Baltimore's Mrs. Adrianne Ayres and Barbara Scarlett will make the feminine field compact.

Fans will be able to witness the nine-day show for $2.50, the price of an advance sale season's ticket. Two decks of stands will be set up to accommodate 1500 spectators.

Houtteman Wins 10th; Hoot Evers Hits No. 14

Detroit, June 28 (AP).—Art Houtteman, the Detroit Tigers' classy righthander, became the first 10-game winner in the major leagues his season as he turned back the Chicago White Sox, 6-2, today.

The victory protected Detroit's four and a half game lead in the American League race as second-place New York beat Washington.

It was the fourth triumph in a row for the 22-year-old Houtteman who has lost five games.

Powerful batting support from Hoot Evers and Don Kolloway broke up Houtteman's pitching duel with Ken Holcombe and sent the Tigers on their way to their third straight win over the Chicagoans.

Evers' fourteenth homer, a 420-foot inside-the-park wallop, drove two runs across in the fifth inning to break a 1-1 deadlock. Don Kolloway added two more in the sixth on his third homer into the left field stands.

St. Louis, June 28 (AP).—A four-run rally on a homer, two doubles and a single in the first inning was just the beginning as the Cleveland Indians mauled the St. Louis Browns 18 to 2 tonight.

The big inning was the seventh when 15 Indians paraded to the plate and knocked in 11 runs. It was Bob Lemon's 10th triumph.

Al Rosen hit the four-bagger in the first frame. Luke Easter and Jim Hegan turned the trick in the seventh. Eight singles and two walks were gathered by the Tribe in the Seventh.

Meyer Still 'Solid' As Manager, Bucs Front Office Says

Indianapolis, June 28 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates contemplate no major changes in either playing or managerial ranks, General Manager Roy Hamey indicated today.

Hamey came here to attend a three-hour conference with Buc President Frank McKinney and Chief Scout Ted McGrew.

After a three-hour session, Hamey declared:

"Billy Meyer (Pirate manager) will remain. He's still as good a manager as he was last year and two years ago. He's in solid. No changes in the coaches are planned, either."

Rookie Holds Champs to 5 Hits Before 3-Run Eighth

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New York, June 28.—Left-handed rookie Al Sima, up from Chattanooga, made his first start for the Nats today, and you could properly say that the Nats did not impress him very much. They got only three hits for him off Allie Reynolds, and took a 5-1 beating from the Yankees.

If the Nats did not impress Sima, the reverse is by no means true. They were quite compelled to like what he showed them—a five-hitter against the Yankees for seven innings, until they showered down with three more hits in the eighth.

The 27-year-old rookie, quite a craftsman with his tricky curve ball, was battling bravely to keep the Nats in the ball game all day. The two runs he allowed in the second inning were tainted by Eddie Yost's wild throw, and then he threw a span of five scoreless innings at the Yanks.

Allie Bosses Nats

He had the misfortune to meet up with Reynolds on one of that pitcher's infrequent good days. Except for the fifth inning, when the Nats had Reynolds on the ropes with one run across and the bases still filled, big Allie was their boss all afternoon.

The Yankees finally blew the game wide open in their eighth. Gerry Coleman followed Phil Rizzuto's single to center, with his fifth homer of the year, a moderate smack into the left field corner seats. A bit later, a walk to DiMaggio, Berra's single and Johnson's fly ball got the Yanks their last run.

The only run the Nats did get was a gift from Reynolds in the fifth, and it was inspired by Sima's own single to center. With two out, Reynolds walked Combs, Noren and Vernon in succession to force the run home.

Mele Ends Rally

Reynolds finally wriggled off the hook with the bases still filled, by getting rid of Sam Mele on a foul pop to Berra. Mele hit only one ball out of the infield all day.

Yost put Sima in trouble in the second inning after Berra led off with a double to center. He came up with Johnson's hard grounder and then pulled Vernon off the bag with a wild throw, permitting Berra to race to third, with none out.

Cliff Mapes' fly to Stewart got Berra home, and Collins then crossed the Nats up with a safe

Windy Sets 1¾-Mile Track Record in Montchain Finale

Bill Bennings . . .

AT DELAWARE

DEAR FOLKS:

The stewards here have set something of a record, suspending eight jockeys in 23 days. Most of the infractions of rules have been detected by the movies of the races. Several well known riders shifted to other tracks rather than risk being set down here. Cal Rainey is the chief steward and is a former jockey. He runs the movie projector and is said to be the man behind most of the rulings. Some of the boys set down say they were only protecting themselves and that the camera doesn't tell that part of the story. Well, Jockey Jake had a big league funeral. He used to say that he didn't care about living like a millionaire. However, he was buried like one—a fitting farewell to the little fellow,—BILL.

Joe Tucci's Incline 2d, Wins Series

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Delaware Park, June 28.—Mrs. Frank A. Bonsal's Windy set a track record for the seldom-used route of a mile and six furlongs here today. The 4-year-old gelding led all the way and wrestled a neck decision from Incline, owned by Joe Tucci of Washington in the final of the Montchain Handicap series. In third position came Mrs. James McGee's Wide Margin.

While Windy won today and paid $8.30, the top horse for the five-way series was Incline with 57 points to Windy's 48, Butler's 51, and Wide Margin's 30. Incline gets a special award of $1500 with $500, $300 and $200 going to the others in the point standings.

Windy was clocked today in 2:57, sending into discard the time of 2:57 2-5 registered by Trierarch with 132 pounds up. Windy carried 113, mostly in the person of Jockey Jack Robertson.

It was a two-horse battle from start to finish. Windy held a slight lead but was continually dogged by Incline, handled by Jockey Carson Kirk. Many believed both of the front-runners would fold the second time around.

The victory allowed Jockey Robertson to gain a tie for leading rider at the meeting with Joe Culmone, who is under suspension until the end of the session here. Robertson went on to score a triple, winning with Tea-Maker and Loran to run his total to 21. Culmone, by the way, lost his apprenceship during his idleness and will have to ride at journeyman weights when he returns to action.

The Chesapeake Bay trio of Owner W. Taylor Leatherbury of Shadyside, Md., Trainer Bill Siegert and Jockey Ernie Wood accounted for another winner today. Early Traffic, a 2-year-old son of Menow and broken on the Leatherbury Farm down by Herring Bay, drove to victory at an $11.80 mutuel in the third race.

bunt. Reynolds singled to left for the second run.

That was enough to beat the Nats. They didn't get any kind of a hit off Reynolds until Stewart singled through the box in the fourth. Sima's hit in the fifth was their second. Merrill Combs singled to center in the seventh for their last hit, but after the fifth they couldn't get anybody to second base.

IN SHORT . . . Eddie Stewart raced in, fell down, got up, and still had time to retreat to the left field fence and snatch a home run away from Hank Bauer in the fifth inning . . . Not until Sima reported yesterday was Bucky Harris aware he wears glasses while pitching . . . When Phil Rizzuto tried to steal a big lead on the rookie, Sima calmly picked him off base in the fifth inning . . . A crowd of 11,252 saw the game today . . . Irv Noren is over-swinging in his anxiety to end his hitting slump . . . Sid Hudson, now getting four days rest under Harris' new plan, will pitch against the Yanks in tomorrow's series finale . . . Bespectacled Joe Ostowski, former-Brownie, will work for New York . . . It took two guys to rob Joe DiMaggio of a hit in today's sixth inning. Combs made an unconscionable pickup for DiMag's fiery smash, and Vernon spaddled a furlong to grab Combs' low throw.

Lord Steward Trot Victor

Lord Steward, a hot horse in California, didn't cool off any at Laurel Raceway last night.

Driven by Guy Crippen, the crack 3-year-old trotter finished with a blaze of speed to take it all in the $10,000 Diamondback Stakes in 2:07 3/5.

The Milwaukee-owned youngster, whose Hambletonian stock was boosted by his $5.50 victory, in this important prep, led Star's Pride to the wire by half a length. Volo A. C. was third.

Lord Stewart thus collected his second $10,000 triumph this season. He took the Western Trot at Santa Anita's mile track in 2.04 4/5.

In the sixth race, Scotty Welch smartly drove Ralph Hanover to a mile and sixteenth track record for the trot. The $10.20 victor went in 2.15 4/5.

IF YOU WANT A CLEAN SCALP—HANDSOME-LOOKING HAIR!

Healthy-looking hair must have a cleaner scalp. So use Kreml! It's never been duplicated to keep hair perfectly in place—it makes hair look naturally well-groomed. It never looks or feels greasy.
And you'll like the invigorating "wake-up" tingle Kreml gives your scalp. It always keeps hair and scalp feeling SO CLEAN. Also excellent to lubricate a dry scalp and remove dandruff flakes.
SAVE MONEY! Buy the new full pint-size Kreml—it saves you nearly 50%.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

Korean Crisis Seen Checking Economy Drive to Cut Jobs

Capitol Hill insiders believe the Korean crisis will have a decided effect on the economy campaign that threatens tens of thousands of Federal jobs.

The grave international outlook has given Senators who oppose the Taber-Thomas and Jensen job-cutting amendments the best possible arguments to use against them. In addition, there are members of Congress who supported the riders but who have lost their enthusiasm for them in view of what's happening abroad.

There is evidence, in fact, that the House has started to backtrack on both Taber-Thomas and the Jensen amendments. By a voice vote, the House refused to include these two amendments in the emergency resolution to advance funds to Federal agencies to meet their payrolls until the general budget bill is enacted into law. During a debate on the riders, offered by Representative Taber (R., N. Y.), the House was told by Representative Rooney (D., N. Y.):

"With the world situation such as we find it today, a fairly reasonable status quo must be maintained in these various Government departments and agencies at least until the other body acts, until the 1951 fiscal year appropriation bill is passed by the Senate. Then the conferees on the part of each body will meet, and the House conferees will come back, which will be in true line with the world situation as of that date."

Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee also used the Korean situation as an argument against the riders. The FBI, he pointed out, "was drastically important to the United States in this international crisis." But if the Taber amendment were approved, FBI personnel would be cut 10 percent and its travel 20 percent next Monday. "Why, it is utterly ridiculous. It simply cannot be done," he said.

Cannon denounced the riders as being impractical. He said they would force the Postoffice to either discontinue mail service to a fifth of its rural patrons or of cutting service to only four deliveries a week.

Taber urged the House not to "back-track." He told his colleagues: "I think we should stand by our position. We should not wipe out those provisions . . ."

The House vote against Taber is regarded as highly significant. It could be the beginning of the end of the Taber-Thomas and Jensen riders.

Incidentally, the House yesterday gave its approval to the emergency resolution to advance funds to Federal agencies. The measure must go back to the House because of a technical Senate amendment.

FSA: The Federal Security Agency yesterday was accused of being "overstaffed" and poorly organized by the Williams subcommittee of the House Civil Service Committee.

The three FSA agencies specifically accused were: The Office of Education, the FSA field service, and offices within the Bureau of Old Age and Survivors Insurance in Baltimore.

The report said that "some of FSA key officials are wary of making decisions that will reduce employment or incur the ill will of a colleague or of a particular group with whom they disagree." It also charged that most FSA officials recognized the agency's shortcomings.

This was the first report made public of the subcommittee set up early this year under Representative Williams (D., Miss.) to study overstaffing in Federal agencies.

PERSONNEL PLAN: The Murray bill to give Federal agencies greater authority to recruit and examine new employes was criticized yesterday by Charles B. Coates, a spokesman for the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report. The bill is advertised as carrying out the Hoover plan for Civil Service.

Coates, however, said the Citizens Committee would like to see action postponed on it until the committee had an opportunity to hear top Federal officials comment on the bill and until the Hoover personnel report could be studied in detail.

The Murray bill covers only several of the recommendations made by the Hoover group.

Police Seek Anonymous 'Culprit' in Morals Case

Letter-Writer Fails To Answer Post Ad; Promised Immunity If He Proves Guilt

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Police yesterday were investigating two anonymous letters written by someone who says he committed the sex perversion act for which Robert Sneed Williams, jr., 45, was convicted.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King turned the letters over to the police.

Today, defense attorneys James C. Rogers and Paul R. Connolly, will seek to have Judge Aubrey B. Fennell of Municipal Court delay sentencing in the case, on the basis of the letters.

Fails to Answer Ad

For the past week the lawyers have published in the classified advertising columns of The Washington Post a plea that the writer of the letters make himself known. He has phoned them twice but refuses to identify himself, they said.

King stated he will guarantee the letter writer immunity if he proves he committed the crime.

"I don't want to see one man punished for the offense of another man, but I will have to have the facts proven," King said. "This may be a hoax."

Williams, a lumber estimator, of 4537 49th st. nw., and at the time of his trial a trustee of All Souls' (Unitarian) Church, was convicted on April 28 of indecently exposing himself to two 14-year-old girls April 10 on Massachusetts ave. nw., near American University.

Clean Bill of Health

At the trial, Williams strongly protested that it was a case of mistaken identity, but the girl's identification was positive.

Judge Fennell found Williams guilty and released him on condition that he seek psychiatric treatment before sentencing.

Two psychiatrists have reported to the court that on the basis of their examinations they see no reason why Williams should be treated.

In stating his findings, Dr. Frank S. Caprio said that he used narcoanalysis to release Williams' inhibitions, but found no abnormality.

"In Mr. Williams' case," Dr. Caprio wrote, "under the influence of three grains of sodium amytal there was no evidence of any past or present sexual irregularity. . . . In the absence of any such finding it would seem prudent to give the victim of circumstance the benefit of the doubt."

Possible, However

Dr. Bernard A. Cruvant said:

"A detailed review of his past history disclosed no constellation of psychopathological factors that would render feasible the prediction that this individual was likely to exhibit himself improperly."

Both psychiatrists acknowledged, however, that it was possible for Williams to have committed the act.

Appeals Court Holds Man's Arrest Illegal

The Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that police cannot purposely refrain from legally arresting a man and then arrest him in a house for which they have no search warrant.

Judge Henry W. Edgerton wrote the unanimous opinion concerning the 1948 numbers lottery conviction of three men and a woman.

"Police planned to and did reject a convenient present opportunity to make a lawful arrest in a public street and, without a search warrant or enough information to get one, broke into a house in order to seize evidence they hoped to find there", the opinion said.

"We think this a plain violation of the prohibition in the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution against unreasonable search and seizure."

Police had a warrant to arrest Ralph W. McKnight, 37, of 836 Division ave. ne., on the grounds that he was "a numbers pickup man," according to the opinion. McKnight was trailed past "an officer stationed in the street to signal a raiding squad," it was testified.

He was arrested in a house for which the officers had no warrant and in which quantities of numbers slips and marked money were found, according to police. Motions to suppress evidence were denied in District Court.

Judge Edgerton ruled that the evidence should have been suppressed and "it follows that all the convictions should be reversed."

Other defendants cleared by the decision are: Othello Washington, 39, 2029 Flagler pl. nw., Charles King, 30, 1343 Q st. nw., and Nancy Buxton, 51, 7111 Euclid st. nw.

Zoo Gets 100-Lb. Grizzly Bear; Famed Smokey Due Today

AT HOME—Newest addition to the local bear colony is this 100-pound grizzly. He arrived yesterday from Yellowstone National Park. Keepers are calling the shaggy-haired newcomer Buster

By Harry Groogwin—The Washington Post

DOWNCAST—Having their ups and downs on their arrival is this pair of young howling monkeys. They joined the monkey colony at the Zoo. Once in their new quarters, the howlers, true to their name, exercised their vocal cords

This is the bear season in Washington, and we don't mean just the Russian kind.

Smokey, the black bear cub which survived a New Mexico forest fire, will arrive at National Airport today and be presented to the Zoo in ceremonies Friday.

Also on the bear-front a young 100-pound grizzly, the first the Zoo has had since World War II, arrived yesterday from Yellowstone National Park. It has long brown hair, long claws and is receiving visitors in the Zoo's bear territory.

Smokey is due to put in at 4 p. m. on the lap of Homer C. Pickens, assistant game warden of New Mexico. He's coming in a Piper Pacer, furnished by the Piper Aircraft Corp. when it was learned that Smokey would have to ride in the baggage compartment if he came by commercial airliner.

Smokey will represent the poster bear Smokey in the campaign against forest fires. The ceremonies Friday will be at 11 a. m. in the bear cage department.

Lyle F. Watts, chief United States Forest Service, and Zoo Director William M. Mann will participate in the presentation. Spicer Conant, 8, of 3063 Ordway st., will accept Smokey from 11-year-old Stanlee Ann Miller of Albuquerque, granddaughter of Senator Dennis Chavez of New Mexico.

Also newly arrived at the zoo is a pair of young howling monkeys, so named for their energetic soundboxes.

Prince Georges 'Streamlines' Itself Under New Law Saturday

Prince Georges County switches over to a new "streamlined" government Saturday. The county commissioners will meet at 9 a. m. that day to put into force the Sothoron Act, passed by the last State Legislature.

Six resolutions, prepared by Jerhold V. Powers, the commissioners' legal adviser, are scheduled for adoption during the session in the Marlboro Courthouse.

Although the resolutions have been studied by the commissioners already, they cannot legally be adopted until July 1, the effective date of the Cothoron Act.

One effect of the "streamlining" will be to establish 15 departments of government, including two entirely new offices.

The new divisions are a department of budget and accounts and a purchasing department.

Other departments to be prescribed are: administrative, law, treasury, assessments, engineering, police, recreation, health, welfare, elections, education, Prince Georges General Hospital and Prince Georges County Memorial Library.

Except for the two new departments, all will be placed under the direction of existing officials or boards now performing the same functions.

Also scheduled for adoption is an 18-point set of rules of procedure for the conduct of business by the commissioners.

One prescribes that all sessions shall be open to the public. This provision also is contained in the recently announced Republican Party platform in Prince Georges.

In general, the rules of procedure tend to restrict informality at commissioners' meetings.

The remaining resolutions prescribe the functions of the administrative, engineering and police departments and the Prince Georges General Hospital.

The selection of a fulltime commissioner, raising of commissioners' salaries and scheduling of biweekly meetings, included in the Sothoron Act, will not take place until December 4. A new board of commissioners is elected in November.

Prince Georges Group Elects W. F. Mulligan

Walter F. Mulligan, of Berwyn, last night was elected chairman of the board of directors of the Citizens' Committee for Good Government in Prince Georges County.

Besides electing officers, the board decided to hold a public forum in July on "The County Manager Form of Government as Compared to the Commissioner Form of Government as it Now Exists in Prince Georges County." Date and place will be announced later.

Mulligan is president of the county civic federation. The eight-member board selected William R. Turner, president of the Chillum Civic Association, as executive secretary charged with responsibility for carrying out the committee program.

The committee was formed May 17 to bring county issues under full public discussion and debate. It has about 170 members, Turner said.

Other officers elected were Robert M. Balkam, of Radiant Valley, recording secretary, and Mrs. Brendan O'Dwyer, of Landover Hills, treasurer.

By drawing lots, Balkam, Mrs. Charles P. Saylor of Hyattsville, John H. Shepherd of Defense Heights, and Theodore L. Miazga of Riverdale, were named to two-year terms on the board.

Turner, Mulligan, Mrs. O'Dwyer, and Mrs. Reuben Bogdanoff, president of the county League of Women Voters, drew one-year terms.

The board, meeting in Turner's home in Chillum, also voted to incorporate.

1 Policeman Cleared of Theft Charge

Air Conditioning Robbery Count Dismissed; Trial of His Partner Goes on

Grand larceny charges against Police Pvt. Henry J. Martin were dismissed in District Court yesterday.

Halfway through the trial of Martin and Pvt. Warren G. Farran, accused of stealing two air conditioning units, Judge Alexander Holtzoff told Government prosecutors they did not have enough evidence to convict Martin.

He then ordered the trial to proceed against Farran. Both the Government and the defense rested late yesterday afternoon. The case against Farran is expected to go to the jury today after final arguments.

The two officers, Eighth Precinct scout car partners, were charged with stealing the units June 6, from the Berkshire Apartments, under construction at 4201 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Saw Them "Innumerable Times"

Night watchman at the project, Sherman T. Callaway, testified he had seen both officers around the project "innumerable times. On the afternoon of June 6, he said, the two officers came to the project and Farran said "I kind of figured on getting me one of these" (air conditioning units).

"I told them those units had been sabotaged during the war by some drunken plumber who put acid in them," Callaway continued. "That was not true but I figured they were going to take one right there."

Defense Attorneys James K. Hughes and T. Emmett MacKenzie objected and Judge Holtzoff ordered the last sentence stricken from the record.

Callaway said he notified the FBI and then the police.

Testifies to Chase

About 9 p. m., he said, two cars arrived, turned their lights out, stayed about 15 minutes then left. "I couldn't see what the occupants were doing," he said.

Lieut. August Helwig, who responded to Callaway's call, testified he chased a car driven by Farran at speeds up to 60 miles an hour, finally caught him, and found the two units in the car.

Farran took the stand and said Callaway had given him the air conditioning units. He said he stopped in his car as soon as he heard Lieut. Helwig's siren.

Farran said he and Martin had arranged a signal between them, while taking the air conditioning units away. This signal, he said, provided that Martin was to blink his lights if their scout car was called, and Farran was to acknowledge the signal by blinking his lights off and on.

Silver Spring Hospital Drive Is Renewed

The Silver Spring Hospital Association, voting to continue its battle for a local hospital, last night charged the Montgomery County Council with throwing a "roadblock" in its path.

Association President Ralph Boyd announced at the special meeting that "there will be a continued program from now until next May to keep alive the association's campaign."

The group adopted a strongly worded resolution deploring County Council's creation of a medical study commission to review the problem.

It urged Silver Spring residents to "disregard the roadblock" and to "proceed resolutely" to get a new hospital.

The study commission bill, offered by Councilman Thomas Kelly, was "enacted as a means of avoiding any effective action this year," the resolution said.

Einar Christensen, president of the Silver Spring Board of Trade, who attended last night's meeting, said, "It would have been better to have denied the request for hospital legislation than to flim-flam us with another survey." He argued that surveys already made by the association and the Montgomery County Medical Society showed the drastic need for a hospital.

Last month, the association took a petition to the Montgomery County Council signed by 5700 residents of the Silver Spring area. It asked for a new hospital, to be financed with 50 percent of the profits from the liquor dispensary system.

The Council turned down this plan, but created the study commission instead.

A 1948 medical survey called for immediate construction of 190 additional beds for general hospital use, based on the county's estimated population of 130,000. Census figures since released show the county now has a population of more than 163,000 persons.

Contractor Leaves $470,050 to His Widow

Isador Young, 70, a contractor who died June 3, left an estate valued at $470,050 entirely to his widow, District Court probate records disclosed yesterday.

Mrs. Rebecca Young, 1355 Peabody st. nw., receives $452,700 in real estate under terms of the will, and $17,350 in personal property. Debts totaling $51,500 were also listed.

Fliers' 'Mother' Loses Serenity At Ceremony in Her Honor

Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

'MOTHER' IS HONORED—Mrs. Mary "Mother" Tusch was happy but flustered when she was presented a testimonial scroll by Maj. Gen. William E. Hall during ceremonies at the Aircraft Bldg., Smithsonian Institution yesterday. She was honored for her humanitarian efforts in behalf of the Air Force during the past 25 years

Mrs. Mary "Mother" Tusch, 73 and invalided, yesterday sat unblinking in her wheelchair as Air Force and museum officials poured out their praises to her.

She was apparently little moved, too, when Maj. Gen. William E. Hall, Air Force officer, presented her with a testimonial of appreciation of the entire Air Force, for "mothering" many of aviation's ace pioneers.

She broke noticeably, however, when presented with a bouquet of red roses, and later before a barrage of news photographers.

"Oh, my," she gasped. "Oh boy, oh boy, oh boy!"

The honor ceremonies were held yesterday amid aviation's history as exhibited in historic planes and engines at Smithsonian Institution. Among the exhibits were many presented to the institution by "Mother" Tusch, who now lives with a daughter, Mrs. Irene Reece, at 705 31st st. S., Arlington, Va.

Mrs. Tusch and her late husband befriended homesick aviation cadets back in World War I days, in their cottage at Berkeley, Calif. The befriended, many of whom became the great and near-great in aviation history, gave her mementos which she cherished and exhibited at her cottage.

When expansion plans of the University of California at Berkeley required the property on which the Tusch cottage was located, she turned over the mementoes, some 22 packing cases full, to the National Air Museum, at Smithsonian.

Yesterday there were tears in the eyes of some of those witnessing the honor ceremonies, but "Mother" Tusch looked on, in apparent happy reveries.

"Oh, boy!" she repeated at the ceremony's end.

Magistrates Declare War On Speeders

Baltimore, June 28 (AP).—Maryland's trial magistrates declared war today on speeders and other reckless drivers.

More than 125 met here with Governor Lane to discuss the mounting traffic toll in the State and find some method to reduce the number of accidents and highway deaths.

Following the two-hour discussion, they decided to:

1. Seek a ruling from the Attorney General on whether county magistrates have power to suspend the licenses of violators. Baltimore City magistrates now have that power.

2. Request authorities to resurvey use of State Police personnel with a view to increasing the number of troopers available for highway patrol work.

3. Appoint a committee of five magistrates from different sections of the State to set up a uniform pattern for guidance of trial magistrates in administration of traffic laws.

State Police, the State Roads Commission and the Department of Motor Vehicles will work with the new committee.

At one point in the discussion, Magistrate J. Fred Ford, of Catonsville, said that "my pet peeve is the so-called politicians who ask to have traffic tickets fixed."

Governor Lane rose to interject:

"I would like to say at this point to all the State's magistrates, that insofar as the exercise of their judgment is concerned, they don't have to listen to anyone or anything except their conscience. And that applies to any officeholder in the State."

Speeder Gets 30 Days For Exceeding 70 M. P. H.

Frederick, Md., June 28 (AP).—Franklin E. Riffle, 21, of Thurmont drew a 30-day jail sentence for driving a car at a speed of more than 70 miles an hour on U. S. Route 40.

State police testified they had paced Riffle at speeds up to 85 miles an hour near Frederick on June 11.

Two Brothers Injured By Car in Bladensburg

Two young brothers were slightly injured yesterday when struck by an automobile as they crossed Annapolis rd., Bladensburg, in the 5800 block.

Edward M. Dwyer, 15, of 6002 Annapolis rd., was admitted to Prince Georges General Hospital with head lacerations and abrasions. His brother, James F. Dwyer, 12, was treated for abrasions.

Prince Georges County police said the driver of the automobile, Kirk C. Miller, jr., 26, of 3515 S st. nw., swerved in an attempt to miss the older boy and skidded into the younger. He was charged with reckless driving, and released under $200 bond.

Has One Hope

Church May Have to Raze New Addition

The Hyattsville Presbyterian Church may have to tear down an addition it is building because of a judge's ruling in Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday.

Last November an employe of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission issued a building permit to the church. It allowed construction of the addition on the southeast corner of 42d ave. and Farragut st., extending to within 13 feet of the property line on 42d ave.

But the M-NCPPC later felt the permit was erroneously issued. It said the building line at that point is legally 25 feet behind the property line. The commission sued to have the partially built structure torn down.

Yesterday, Judge J. Dudley Digges agreed with the planning commission.

But Judge Digges left open one avenue of redress for the church. He refused to order the structure razed until the church can take its case to the Board of Zoning Appeals. This board could make an exception and let the church ignore the set-back line.

Judge Digges, in his decision, sympathized with the church's position, but he said he is bound by earlier decisions of appellate courts.

10 Hygienists, 15 Dentists Pass District Exams

Fifteen dentists and 10 dental hygienists have successfully passed June examinations for the right to practice in the District of Columbia, it was announced yesterday.

Those approved by the Board of Dental Examiners of the District of Columbia, official licensing body, include:

Dentists: Drs. Leonard A. Altemus, Robert A. Anderson, Charles W. Baumberger, William G. Bode, Edward C. Brezon, Fred H. Chandler, Stanley H. Gottlieb, William R. Hernandez, Joseph M. LeMense, jr., Mordecai W. Johnson, jr., John B. McVeigh, Clemens V. Rault, Charles W. Ray, Joseph M. Regnanese, and Paul W. Sathre.

Hygienists: Ann G. Carr, Ruth I. Foerster, Rosaline Freeman, Katherine Lieber, Fredda D. Lipps, Beverly A. Payne, Mary S. Thompson, Alma J. Turner, Mary L. Tuttle and Vivienne I. Weis.

Sesquicentennial Committee Meets

The executive committee of the National Sesquicentennial Commission met yesterday afternoon in the National Press Building. Carter Barron, executive vice chairman of the commission, said the group discussed routine business.

Conferees Ask 3-Year Program for Child Care

Surprise Decision Refers New Day Plan to Senate, House for Action

In a surprise move, Senate and House conferees yesterday agreed quickly to extend the District child day care program for three years.

The program for children of working mothers here ends Friday under existing law.

The unexpected conference report still must clear both houses before going to the White House.

Still Faces Snag

The 3-year day care legislation could hit a snag in the House, which on Monday voted to extend the program for just one more year.

Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) of the House District Committee, will call up the measure on the House floor today.

Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.), chairman of the District subcommittee which recommended a 1-year extension, last night indicated he was uncertain whether he will fight the plan to give the child centers a 3-year lease on life.

The conference report was a major victory for Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.). Since early last year she has fought to make the program a city fixture.

Her drive resulted in Senate passage of a permanent day care bill, and Tuesday, largely at Senator Smith's insistence, the Senate District Committee voted to reject the House one-year-only measure, thus sending it to conference.

Joint Agreement

Agreement was reached at yesterday's joint meeting when Senators Smith and Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) suggested a compromise of five to three years' extension. Senator Estes Kefauver, the other Senate conferee, joined them.

McMillan and Walter K. Granger (D., Utah), both strong advocates of the program, promptly accepted the Senate proposal.

The other House conferee, Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), who has expressed doubts about the centers in the past, did not attend the meeting yesterday, being out of the city.

$75,000 Fire Wrecks Plant In Rockville

A fireman was injured in Rockville, Md., last night in a $75,000 blaze which destroyed the Red Ball Manufacturing Co., on Route 240 opposite the carnival grounds, and attracted 3000 spectators.

Volunteer fighters from six companies left a firemen's parade in Sandy Spring, Md., 11 miles away, to fight the blaze for two hours. Flames at times shot 50 feet in the air and smoke was visible for 15 miles, observers reported.

Sixteen fire trucks and eight ambulances responded including the Gaithersburg, Rockville, Chevy Chase, Kensington, Glen Echo and Silver Spring volunteer fire fighters and the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad.

Falls Church Lists Annexation Benefits

A partial outline of benefits that Falls Church Church proposes to give new residents if its annexation suit against Fairfax County is successful was handed to a three-judge Annexation Court yesterday.

Testifying in the seventh day of the suit in Fairfax Circuit Court, City Manager Roy F. Dunn said the city expects to spend more than two million dollars in physical improvements in the annexable zone if it obtains the 10.75 square miles of Fairfax territory it seeks.

The expenditures, itemized in an exhibit filed with the court, include $1,565,040 for construction of schools, streets, a combined police and fire station and an athletic field and $569,000 for improvement of water and sewerage facilities, Dunn testified.

Existing municipal services also will be expanded to serve the enlarged territory, Dunn said. He estimated at $211,355 the increase in operating cost for the city in the first year after annexation.

Expanded services will result in the employment of additional personnel in several key city departments, including the police force, Dunn said. Several department heads will be given pay increases commensurate with their added responsibilities, he added.

Dunn told of plans to expand the police force. He expressed the belief the Fairfax County force is inadequate to police properly the congested annexation area. In contrast to the 41 county officers responsible for policing more than 400 square miles of territory, he said, the enlarged city force would have 21 policemen patrolling an area of about 13 square miles.

At the beginning of proceedings yesterday, attorneys for both sides reported "some progress" in their efforts to reach agreement on the assessed value of the disputed territory. Attorneys for the county insist on 12 million dollars as the area's assessed value. Counsel for Falls Church ask that it be set at 11 million dollars. In the event of a compromise, their stipulated figure would form one of the bases for a financial settlement to be determined by the court in the event it favors the annexation.

John Hancock's Prizes Listed For Imitating Signature

Persons most successful in imitating the signature of John Hancock, first signer of the Declaration of Independence, will win tickets to the Fourth of July celebration here, "Salute to Independence."

First prize will be 10 tickets, second prize, five and third prize, two.

The contest opened yesterday at the trailer booth in front of the District Building, and is being judged by John Hancock, a Washington businessman, Mrs. Dorothy Eaton, of the Library of Congress' manuscript division, and a handwriting expert from the Metropolitan Police Department.

The contest will close at 2 p. m. Monday, July 3. All signatures submitted will be inscribed on the "scroll of freedom."

Contestants for "Miss Washington of 1950" are instructing signature writers, as well as handling ticket sales at the booth for the celebration, to be held on the Monument grounds. Tickets will be 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children.

Hecht's Wins Property Suit In Arlington

An Arlington County Circuit Court jury yesterday struck down a suit against The Hecht Co. over ownership of a piece of the Arlington site where a branch of the store is to be built.

The civil suit for $250,000 was brought by George Wilfred Beall, 3801 N. Stafford st., and his brother, William H. Beall, 2009 N. Oakland st., both of Arlington. The plaintiffs argued that a 6½-acre portion of the site should have reverted to them under their grandfather's will when their father, George Beall, died in 1949.

Circuit Court decisions in 1909 and 1928 entitled the plaintiffs' father to sell the land. Attorneys Edgar Pumphrey and Warren Miller contended the rulings were void because the Arlington Court had no jurisdiction, but Judge Walter T. McCarthy dismissed their plea.

The Bealls' attorneys then filed a motion to dismiss the jury's verdict. Arguments will be heard July 11.

Lawyers for the defendants were James H. Simmonds, Lawrence Douglas, and Louis Denit.

A Hecht Co. official yesterday said the store is "going ahead with paper plans," and expects to have the six-million-dollar Arlington branch open by fall of 1951, as originally announced.

The store will occupy an 18-acre triangular tract, bounded by Wilson blvd., N. Glebe rd., and Randolph st., with space for about 2000 cars. A shopping center is also planned as part of the development.

Housebreaking Counts Against Man Dropped

Five charges of housebreaking against Hubert H. Council, 36, who was arrested June 9 after several Fairfax Village apartments had been looted, were dismissed yesterday by U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Commissioner Lawrence acted when Assistant U. S. Attorney Andrew Howard said the Government lacked sufficient evidence to make a case.

Council was arrested in New York after several housewives said they had seen a tall, blond, well dressed stranger in Fairfax Village on May 22, when cash and jewelry had been taken from nine apartments there, and after they picked Council's picture from police files.

The hearing was continued from last Wednesday pending a Government investigation. Council had been held under $12,500 bond.

Close Attachment Between Mother and Daughter Grows Painful for Girl Since Her Marriage, as Mama Confidently Criticizes Her Son-in-Law

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In the seven years we've been married, Jim and I have visited my family on an average of every six weeks. During these visits my nerves are frazzled by mother's constant criticism of Jim behind his back. He has never said an unkind thing to her or about her, yet she disparages him all the time, and when we get away, her comments return to upset me.

For instance, shortly after we arrived one day, my father was setting out plants. Jim, still dressed in tailored clothes, stood conversing with him. First thing mother said was, "Now why doesn't Jim help dad with those plants? Can't he see dad is tired?" Other samples, "I can tell Jim is home; look at the papers in the living room." Or, "I declare, that Jim is the slowest mortal that ever walked." Molehills seem like mountains in a few days.

I am perfectly aware that my husband isn't perfect. There were 10 children in his family and only two of us, and I grant he didn't receive the attention and training bestowed on us. But he conducts himself properly and is wonderful to me in every way. Mother and I were always very close, but I also love Jim, and I haven't asked her to visit us recently because her criticism makes my life miserable.

Move Beckons; Girl Hesitates

SO MUCH for background. The immediate matter is that Jim has been offered a job in a distant state. If we go, it would cut down our family visits to two a year. I feel we should go, both for my husband's advancement and to escape mother's corrosive criticism. And yet, thinking of mother, I hate to go so far away, because she depends so much upon me, as my sister is still in her teens and my dad drinks heavily.

Boiled down, I guess the problem is—should we move, and in reality run away? Or should I squelch mother's criticism, once and for all? It would tear my heart out to chide her about this, but for several years she has made visits agony for me. Your opinions will be appreciated. K. R.

Childish Level of Bad Feeling

DEAR K. R. It seems to me that your mother's confidential carping about Jim is a thoughtless expression of childish jealously which you take too seriously. You are reacting with anxious filial defensiveness, instead of evaluating her performance with adult discernment.

She doesn't really think ill of Jim. She just feels impelled to take him down a peg or two in your estimation if she can, without knowing why, and without hearing herself or remembering what she says. You may ask why she takes this tack? Obviously she is an unhappy person frustrated and maladjusted, who requires too much of family relationships, due to her failure to achive a mature orientation to her environment. She lacks the variety of social interests that nurture wholesome character.

On the maladjusted side, she is a momtype, therefore inordinately possessive of her children's affections. And quite illogically she feels affronted when she notes the aura of pride, contentment, approval, etc., that envelops your manner towards Jim when you arrive for visits. She resents your fulfilled air of happiness with him, because she feels "slighted" by the phenomenon, as if it meant she is no longer necessary to your psychological well being—as indeed she shouldn't be, if her maternal tasks were well performed in proper season.

Don't Fear God; Accept His Help

THUS you see you are being even more childish than she, which is saying a lot, when you suffer agony at her unkind critiques of Jim, while never daring to challenge them firmly, with frank statements that they hurt your feelings or don't do justice to the wonderful man he is. Your close attachment to your mother is morbid rather than mutually helpful, and reflects little credit on either of you, if you feel you cannot plainly protest her nagging comments without incurring hysterics, inward or vocal.

In using you as a leaning post, she's probably made a habit of playing upon your sympathies, threatening you with rejecting attitudes if you offered any dissent to her self-pitying or self-aggrandizing views. Thus you're conditioned to yes-man subservience, in terror of being cast into the "outer darkness" of her disfavor if you dispute any detail of her pronouncements. Since being married you resent this psychological slavery, and your hostile sentiment kindles guilty notions that you are an "unnatural" daughter.

For advice, if the job offers advancement for Jim, go with good conscience, accepting the transfer as an act of Providence that heals the problem of "family visits," without oratory from you. How can the move be "running away" if Jim doesn't know he's been under fire. M. H.

Men Take the Lead In Man-Made Fabric

By Peggy Preston

NOW WE know where all that much-heralded, highly-fabulous miracle fiber, Orlon, has gone. Into men's lightweight summer suits!

Can you believe it? Here we've been sitting around waiting for that marvelous new synthetic yarn to revolutionize our homework (in a manner to shame nylon, according to the publicists).

And what happens? The boys get it first.

Well, since it's a so-called "man-made" fiber, they are probably entitled to it.

Moreover, if Orlon helps the poor dears to better weather Washington's torrid season, we can't rightfully complain. Someone, or something, should have come to their rescue eons ago. On that day, in fact, when some ill-advised arbiter of dress decreed that men wear the same amount of clothing in summer as they do in winter.

Releases Made From Compromise

NOW OF course, Orlon does not solve this particular problem. Shirt, coat, trousers, tie and belt are still considered essential outerwear garments for men's correct town wear, despite the condition of the thermometer. What Orlon, nylon or rayon, does do, however, is give promise of releasing the male from the bonds of a hitherto dreadful compromise. He could either swelter through the summer in a wool suit, and look relatively neat. Or he could wear cotton seersucker which grew more wilted and wrinkled with each washing.

With the advent of the synthetic yarns it is now possible to make business suits that are comfortable, cool, and good looking as well. Science has made it possible to produce textiles that weigh much less, are porous to allow for air-circulation, and have high crease-resistance. Neither will they shrink, or lose "finish" from washing or cleaning.

All this is accomplished, usually, with blended fibers. The all-rayon suit, seeing its second year of popularity, is an exception. But there is no such thing as an all-Orlon suit, for instance; a small amount of this acrylic fiber is woven with others, such as nylon and cotton, to produce a fabric with the properties listed above. Then, we have nylon and rayon blends, mohair and rayon, and several others. All are quite lightweight, weighing about 8 ounces to the yard. From them are being made handsome, well tailored business and town suits that put an end to the outfit that looks as though you slept in it by 10 o'clock of a hot, steamy summer morning.

Free Sport Coat From Grip of Wool

LIGHTER weight weaves and blends of fabrics are freeing the sports coat from the hot and heavy grip of wool. Nylon, combined with wool makes for a soft, strong, all year coat. Palm Beach cloth, mixing wool with 25% nylon, creates a sports jacket that looks at home anywhere. Then there is a fine linen-like rayon, a lightweight spun rayon, both of which tailor beautifully.

There's lots of relief in sight for the boys in other items of their wardrobe. Summer shirts are made of thin cotton with large pores allowing plenty of air-circulation. A hat no longer needs to feel like a pressure cooker atop of broiling dome. There are lightweight Milans, mesh panamas and other straws, all geared to summer comfort.

In the footwear department socks are made of thin, porous cotton, nylon or rayon. Even shoes are feeling the magic touch of the synthetics, and you find nylon mesh combined with leather. Makes for breezes where you need them most—on the toeline.

SYNTHETIC fibers have made it possible for men to have cool, well-tailored suits this summer. Orlon, one of the newest of the "man-made fibers," is blended with others to create the air-cooled fabric for this suit. Comes in single and double-breasted versions. Colors are blue, gray and brown

Walter Winchell —In New York

The Wiseguy Set

Gambler Frank Erickson's predicament was Topic "A" among the stay-up-lates last night . . . George White, the producer, revealed how the horses "lost" him . . . He wagered $200,000 on one horse, Exterminator, which "couldn't possibly lose," but did . . . "It was the last horse bet I ever made," he intoned . . . As the field broke Exterminator was kicked by another horse and never got started . . . One night White was down to his last $1000, after losing a young mint in the market . . . He went to a Hollywood party where Irving Berlin, Jos. M. Schenck and other millionaires were playing table-stakes stud poker . . . There were $200,000 in chips in front of the players . . . White decided to invest his lone "G" . . . Two hours later he cashed in $75,000 . . . It was that coin which put on his 1939 "Scandals" and White back on The Big Time.

Gamblers Are Like This: A disgruntled horse-player was telling the group about a hot tip he didn't bet on. "How come?" they asked . . . "I went home to get the $300," he wept, "and found out the Mrs. blew it on the rent!"

After gambler Arnold Rothstein was slain in a Broadway hotel room, allegedly by other gamblers, the police couldn't pin it on anyone . . . Insiders said the cops didn't want to know—fearing a probe would reveal underworld political links . . . The stalling reached the point where both the police and the district attorney invited the killer to surrender . . . It became a national joke after Will Rogers (in a revue) got a howl every night by inviting Rothstein's killer to stand up and "take a bow!"

Chinatown once had a Gamblers' Union. It established the rules for about 200 gaming places . . . The Tongs provided the power behind that setup . . . One of the best known Chinese gamblers in the United States was Mock Duck . . . While walking one day he wagered some rich friends that an orange on a pushcart had an "Even" amount of seeds . . . Mock bet his entire fortune, his home, furniture and burial plot in China on it . . . He won but neyer collected . . . In Chinatown they tell you that's how the first of the Tong Wars started.

The late Colonel E. R. Bradley of Palm Beach (whose "Bradley's" attracted the socially registered gamblers) was invariably at the Saratoga races in August . . . He dwelled at the United States Hotel, where for 15 years the same old colored waiter served him in the dining room . . . One morning Bradley was confronted by a "new" waiter . . . "Where's old Joe?" he asked . . . "He's stationed at the other end," was the answer . . . "Well, get him!" said Bradley. "Why arent you waiting on me?" he asked Joe. "Sorry, Colonel," Joe explained, "but I lost you in a crap game."

The "Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo" was Charles Wells . . . He won $400,000 in 3 nights . . . Wells was a man of tremendous stamina . . . He could sit 11 hours without food, never stirring from his pew .

Monte Carlo's boast that the games there "are always straight" prompted an unsung cynic to observe: "They had better be because most of the scoundrels in the world play there and couldn't be fooled."

Colorful John Morrissey, founder of the Saratoga racetrack, was also a rough-and-tumble scrapper, fireman and Tammany politico . . . He operated a gambling spot here at 8 Barclay st., which he sold for a net profit of a million . . . Morrissey gobbled up another 5 million at his Saratoga Club, where there were only two rules: No women or Saratoga residents could gamble.

He finally was "taken" by Commodore Vanderbilt, slickest of them all . . . Vanderbilt sold him N. Y. Central stock, which took such a dive on a long ago Black Friday—that Morrissey was no longer rich and Vanderbilt was richer . . . Vanderbilt, by the way, got the Commodore title running a ferry.

The creator of the "Gold Brick" was Reed Waddell, who came from a well-to-do family in Illinois . . . But he couldn't resist taking suckers and went into the con-man racket . . . Waddell turned out to be a terrific chump himself, his vice being the nags . . . One year he lost 2 million on them . . . A crony was "Old Man" Eaton, who resembled Mr. Justice Charles Evans Hughes . . . Another was "Fred the Florist," who got that handle because he ate flower-petal salads.

There have been various versions of how "Honest John" Kelly got his nickname . . . "Honest John" eventually became a leader of Tammany Hall . . . When he was an umpire he turned down a $10,000 bribe to favor Boston in a game with Providence. Years later they learned he had more coin than that on Providence!

Richard Canfield ran the best known gambling house in the Nation . . . It was on 44th st. . . . When one of the Vanderbilt clan lost $100,000 one night he complained to a political pal who phoned Canfield: "I advise you to give him back his money" . . . Canfield said: "No dice. If I do that, every sucker I beat will put the squeeze on me!" . . . Two days later Canfield's was raided and never resumed. He left an estate of $841,485.

Theodore Hostetter, one of Pittsburgh's playboys (at the turn of the century), squandered a million dollars just before his death —tossing pennies . . . He considered roulette too slow "for real action."

Good gamblers must have courage . . . Charley Teenan, famed faro king of New Orleans, was dealing the cards . . . Looking up, he saw the Southern Hotel (across the street) on fire . . . Teenan dashed into the flames and rescued four persons. He perished trying to save a fifth.

Nick the Greek, noted for the fancy fortunes he's won and lost, rarely gambles with his own money, they say . . . The legend is his backers are wealthy Greeks and socialites . . . They back him on percentage deals . . . There was the time one of the newcomer "angels" tried to pull out his investment just before Nick entered a big-money dice game . . . They argued about it—when Nick challenged: "All right—let's toss for it!" . . . The Greek lost the toss but talked him into it with: "This must be your lucky day; don' pull out now!" . . . Once asked why he gambled for such high stakes, he said: "Money isn't the best thing in the world. I just like it best."

Girl Unhurt As Her Horse Falls to Death

The Washington Post
LAURIE GASKINS
. . . escapes injury

A 14-year-old Bethesda girl escaped injury yesterday when the horse she was riding crashed through the covering of a well and plunged eight feet to its death.

The horse was impaled on a water pipe running to the top of the well. Sgt. John Leahy of the Montgomery County police ended the animal's suffering with a shot from his revolver.

Astride the ill-fated mare was Laurie Gaskins, of 5719 York lane, Bethesda, who was graduated this month from Leland Junior High School.

Riding with her, on another horse, was Vera Curtis, 15, of Valley rd., Bethesda, owner of both horses. It was about 10:30 a. m. and the girls were riding 500 yards off Green Tree rd. in Bethesda on a trail which leads by an abandoned farmhouse.

Laurie's mount, named Personality, stepped on some rotten boarding covering a 4-foot square well. As the mare plunged into the well, the girl leaped to safety.

The water pipe, an inch and a qarter in diameter, penetrated the mare's belly and emerged near the neck.

Pioneer Tradition Held Valuable

Pioneer Tradition Keeps Its Value

With Independence Day coming up next week, The Washington Post gives its readers some sound reasons for celebrating.

The reasons come from an American newspaper correspondent who has rediscovered America after years in Europe and the Middle East.

This is the fourth of six articles on the theme "Let Freedom Ring," in which the author compares the American way of life with that of

By George Herald

CHAPTER FOUR

The butler put our coats into the closet and said:

"Please go right into the living room, sir. Mr. and Mrs. Curry are expecting you."

The last time I saw Curry was in a pup-tent on maneuvers with the Eighty-second Airborne in Kentucky in 1943. We had shared the tent, four blankets, two candles and between 150,000 and 200,000 mosquitoes. Today he is reported to have twice as many dollars as we used to have mosquitoes.

Curry got out of the Army in 1946. While I was on my beat in Europe, he got awfully busy in New York City. With $1200 of his own and a veteran's loan, he started to produce a screw which the building trade found was indispensable.

It sold like hot cakes. Within four years Curry became a moderately wealthy man with a small estate in Great Neck, four servants, two station wagons and a medium-sized yacht.

That sounds like most success stories you read in the newspapers and magazines. "Build a better mousetrap, and the world will beat a path to your door."

Yet they never mention the maze of boring details the man had to deal with on his way up, the astute calculations, the incredible amount of plain drudgery which go into such an achievement.

"Throughout my experience," President Truman told the Brooks School graduates the other day, "I have observed that nothing is as important in the American way of living as work. Our concept of success from the pioneer days was embodied in the word work."

It still is. Curry was no exception. Merely among my acquaintances, I found at least a dozen who had made good as their own bosses since the end of the war. There must be several hundred thousand others.

In most of Europe today, such "success stories" have become virtually impossible. Yes, many people over there still make a lot of money. In Italy and Spain notably, I was invited by families living in a luxury all the more ostentatious as it clashed with the misery around them.

But their fortunes were either very old or had been acquired by illicit dealings during and immediately after the war.

You can find wealthy people in France, Belgium, even Germany. A young man, however, who wants to build a business of his own, is up against ever mounting obstacles. There are simply too many eager-beaver officials trying to make the world safe for bureaucracy.

Raymond P., a Paris friend of mine, wanted to open a small plant to process tallow and candle grease for industrial use. He knew his business, he had some money and he found a suitable workshop for rent.

Under the rent control law, his "bail" had to be approved by the government. That required 4 weeks. Then he had to register his firm with the authorities. Another 2 weeks passed. Now he was ready to apply for his first quota of tallow, the government being sole distributor of all grease materials. Five weeks more were lost.

When Raymond finally started operating, he had to fill out dozens of forms on every transaction he made. He found himself wasting the best of his time waiting in anterooms, talking to government officials and strangling in a tangle of red tape. After 6 months of that, he closed his shop, sold his "bail" and took a job in a chemical factory.

That is one of many such cases that illustrate the trend in the Old World. Americans originally emigrated from Europe to get away from the notion that the State stands above its citizens. Our state was created by a voluntary pact between individuals for the sole purpose of serving them in their mutual relations. If we abondon that concept, our forebears could just as well have stayed over there.

In Europe and in America, you can make out a case for a certain amount of government planning; it is said that "planning" is unavoidable in our time, because most people prefer a weekly paycheck to the ring of their own cash register. Their rights must certainly be protected, but why should we discourage those among us who still have pioneer blood in their veins?

My friend on Long Island who manufactured the screw for builders told me:

"Let's not kid ourselves; most of what's great and lasting in this country has been created through the private initiative of bold and stubborn men, often in the face of overwhelming odds. Let's not change it any more than we have to."

In Duesseldorf last February, a local German industrial committee was setting a dinner table for a roving committee of Americans. Among them was the director of a huge national concern and the owner of a comparatively minor Chicago enterprise.

The problem arose in the Germans' minds as to which "outranked" the other.

The awed Germans wanted to seat the director of the big company ahead of the small businessman, but a United States official explained to them:

"Director X. is an employe, Mr. Y. a self-made man. It is the American tradition to rate the owner of a firm, however small, the more important person."

After all I have seen abroad, I think that tradition is worthy to be upheld.

Advice for Gagwriters

No Comic Would Buy A Joke He Can Steal

—By John Crosby—

A SIX-POINT program for capturing a job as a radio comedy writer has just been released by the Gagwriters Institute which, as any fool knows, is the Harvard of the gagwriting profession. This six-point program was distilled from a series of lectures delivered by a host of noted scholars and pedagogues, including Milton Berle, Goodman Ace, Hal Block and Smith & Dale.

Goodman Ace

Naturally, a document prepared by such an awe-inspiring roster of intellectuals is a very important document indeed, conceivably the greatest contribution to the field of education since the invention of the printing press. Just the same, I'm a little puzzled by part of this six-point program. Let's take up point 1. Point 1 advises the aspiring young comedy writer to send topical jokes each week to the comedian he'd like to work for. "After six weeks, he'll find it easier to buy them than to steal them from you," it says here.

Just a Minute

NOW wait a minute, boys! I'm afraid Berle, Ace and the rest of them, much as I respect their scholastic eminence, have been living behind the cloistered walls of the Gagwriters Institute for too many years. To accuse a comedian of buying material that he can just as easily steal is an affront to the comedian's intelligence. It's a well-recognized fact that money, that filthy stuff, takes some of the bloom off a joke. On the other hand, a joke that has been honorably filched from another comedian retains its original purity, its innocence. And anyway, money leads to the ruin of young writers. They fall into all sorts of bad habits, like eating. So much for Point 1.

Let's move on now to Point 3. "Discover a new young comic." That's like advising the young writer to marry a rich wife. Trapping new young comics is the most difficult and hazardous form of big-game hunting there is. Some people have devoted their lives to hunting new comics and never bagged a single one. They don't even tell you where to look. The best hunting grounds I know is Brooklyn. Young comics grow wild in Flatbush where the environment is pregnant at all times with comic possibilities.

Point 5. "Write a comprehensive criticism every week of the radio program on which you want a job, telling in complete detail how you could help Bob Hope, Groucho Marx, Milton Berle . . . (NOTE: HENRY MORGAN WILL NOT ACCEPT CRITICISM.)" Well, I concur in that upper case note. But I'd like to point out that Henry Morgan is not the only one who will not accept criticism. Others who won't, include Bob Hope, Groucho Marx and Milton Berle. I ought to know. I'm in the business.

Retroactive Note

GOT another little note on popular education. That tireless investigator of other people's business, Allen Funt, took his "Candid Camera" and his concealed microphone out the other day to find out how many people knew what the word "retroactive" meant. He walked up to an elevator starter and declared belligerently: "Listen, I think you ought to know that the last elevator on the right side is retroactive."

"Gee," said the starter, "I haven't heard any complaints from the elevator man."

"It's dangerous."

"Gee, we'll have to look into it. You think it's very dangerous?"

"It certainly is dangerous. You can get into all kinds of trouble with that."

Funt then wandered out, smiling his sadistic smile, and accosted a young lady at a soda fountain. "Boy," he exclaimed, "isn't this weather retroactive, though?" She agreed heartily that it was.

"Most retroactive day we've had," said Funt. "Yes," said the girl. "Terrible."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Speaking of Definitions, How's This One?

Molly Guertler of 608 N. Ivy st., Arlington, Va., observes:

"A rumpus room is where the kids go when they're tired of playing in the living room."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

What's the "morning line" on the Gallaher - Evans - Strong - Douglas match?

If the price is right, I might risk a bob or two on our boy Steve Douglas. He hits a long iron. Holly Wright

Dear Holly:

I suggest you listen to Holly Wright's WRC newscast at 7 o'clock any weekday morning. Chances are you'll hear him talk about a Congressional committee which is currently probing into gamblers and gambling.

Besides, betting on Douglas would be like throwing your money away. I beat Steve out of a cigar one time, and anybody I can beat is no golfer.

Bill

P. S. Incidentally, we were playing practically even up. All he spotted me was three blows on each side. And all putts under 10 feet.

I BIT ON IT

When my 14-year-old relative asked which side of a dog had the most hair he had me stumped. The little rascal explained: "The outside."

COLLEGE HUMOR

A professor at George Washington University was explaining tremendous mass increases in population to his international politics class the other day.

"One reason for this phenomenon," he said, "is the decreasing rate of mortality; and for another reason, you might just leave the first 't' out of the word."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Seven-week-old puppies; their mother was a purebred cocker, and father must have been an extraordinary fence-climber." (Kenmore 3-6281.)

"Three black female puppies; their mother was a purebred cocker." (Hobart 0804, extension 506, between 6:30 and 7:30 p. m. today only.)

"Terrier-type female dog, gentle with children." (Alexandria 4766.)

"Three 7-week-old kittens." (Falls Church 6246.)

"Two black Siamese kittens, 10 weeks old." (Oliver 7691 evenings.)

"Three cute, healthy kittens; will deliver." (Glebe 7411.)

"Pert, lively black puppy, 7 weeks old; father was a thoroughbred cocker." (Owens 7526.)

"Two playful, well-marked 7-week-old kittens." (Wisconsin 4841.)

THOSE ARROWS AGAIN

It has long been my contention that our system of traffic light "arrows" could stand a great deal of improvement.

For example, there is no uniformity with regard to the straight arrow.

At some intersections it means "Through Only," at some it means "Through and Right," and at still others it means "Through and Left."

There are two ways to know which is which. Either memorize the directions at every intersection in town, or learn to read those tiny signs from a distance of 100 yards, while your car is moving through the night (probably with torrents of rain splashing against your windshield). Neither alternative is very practical.

Currently, I'm in receipt of two complaints that motorists have gotten tickets at a "new" light at Pennsylvania and East Executive aves. nw.

Investigation reveals that the old light has been "improved" to the extent that it is now quite confusing.

Coming east past the White House, I encountered a straight arrow, without explanation as to what it meant. I waited in the right-hand lane and pretty soon got another arrow which certainly pointed to the right, and possibly pointed also to the left. The reflection of the light and the sun made it impossible to be sure.

I turned right, parked my car, and came back to talk to the policeman on the corner.

"When does the left arrow come on?" I asked.

"There isn't any left arrow," he replied. "You turn left on the 'Through' arrow. Except when the neon sign says 'No Left Turn.'"

"How is a motorist supposed to know that?" I persisted. "There's no explanation as to what the various arrows permit."

The cop shrugged. "I don't put these lights up, Mac. I just see that they're obeyed."

Under the circumstances, I'd think the least we could do for our confused motorists is refrain from handing out violation tickets for a couple of weeks, until folks become accustomed to changes in signal lights.

After all, if we Washingtonians can't figure the doggone things out, how are tourists supposed to know what they mean?

Diplomats Beat Army on Korea

By Drew Pearson

Though the State Department has been getting all the brickbats re past Far Eastern failures, the inside story of what happened in Korea makes the diplomats look a lot better than the United States military.

MacArthur

Though Secretary of Defense Johnson and General Bradley were in Tokyo just a few days before the Korean attack, they received no word from General MacArthur that there was any danger.

In fact, MacArthur seemed completely obsessed with trouble in Japan and the idea of keeping Formosa. The latter island seems to have a sentimental attachment for MacArthur, perhaps because it was the Jap jumping-off spot for the Philippine invasion.

Not only is Korea about 30 miles from Japan and completely in MacArthur's military jurisdiction, but millions of dollars are spent annually for counterespionage to see what the prospective enemy is doing. It is exactly for the purpose of preventing surprises such as that which has now occurred in Korea that the United States Army and Central Intelligence have been allotted huge budgets since the war—far bigger than that allowed the State Department.

United States military chiefs were caught badly off base.

On the other hand, State Department expert Ambassador John J. Muccio came to Washington one month ago and privately warned that Korea was in danger of attack. At first he had hard sledding. The Joint Chiefs of Staff said they had no warning from MacArthur, who is supposed to keep an eye on Korea. However, Ambassador Muccio cited chapter and verse regarding Communist troop concentrations in the north; finally got a shipment of heavy artillery, capable of stopping Soviet tanks.

This artillery was actually on the high seas and due in Korea this week—when suddenly Moscow attacked.

Note—United States counter-espionage agents are on the trail of the leak regarding news of this arms shipment. The fact that heavy artillery was en route was a secret known to only a few high officials in Washington and Seoul. Obviously, however, the secret leaked to the Communists, with their attack timed to begin before the artillery arrived.

A Korean beauty, the mistress of an American officer in Korea, is under investigation in connection with the leak.

Rhee a Problem

One of the United States' problems in bolstering Korea was a likable, well-meaning stubborn Korean who long lived in exile in Washington, 80-year-old President Syngman Rhee. Rhee came to the United States as a student, studied under Woodrow Wilson when he was a professor at Princeton, was so close to Wilson that he attended his wedding.

Later, as the Jap war lords tightened their grip on Korea, Rhee found it unwise to go home, and set up a government-in-exile in Washington. At one time Cordell Hull intervened on his behalf when Rhee wanted to marry an Austrian woman but could not get a passport visa. Learning of this, Secretary Hull told his passport officials to expedite the visa, thus Rhee got married.

After V-J Day, Syngman Rhee seemed a natural to become President of Korea, and with the help of the United States military he was put in office. However, Rhee, then over 80, was too old, too rigid, had lived too long outside his country, was not familiar with modern Korean problems. Ambassador Muccio has had session after session with the stubborn Rhee, demanding that he clean up graft, hold elections, and purge the Communists from his government. The latter had caused wholesale desertions from the Korean army, had inspired guerilla attacks and intermittent uprisings. Finally Rhee agreed to hold elections on May 30, and on that date his party lost.

Possibly the prospect of a new, strong government which would clean up internal communism was another reason for the Communist attack on South Korea at this time. At any rate, only three days after the elections, June 2, Communist leader Huh Hun tried to incite troops at Pyongyang, capital of North Korea:

"Strive more than ever to train yourselves," he said. "Study so you may overthrow and smash the Syngman Rhee traitor gang."

To this, the spokesman for South Korean army deserters replied: "We will grasp firmly the sword in order to obliterate from our fatherland the so-called American military advisers, the United Nations commission and their lackey, the Syngman Rhee gang. We pledge our last drop of blood."

Despite this, the United States military failed to think there was any danger in Korea.

Note—It is interesting that just two days before the Korean attack, the Central Intelligence Agency, set up to warn the United States of military movements before they start, reported that not since V-J Day had the world seemed more peaceful. The Russians, CIA reported, had ceased threatening troop movements and border concentrations.

Merry-Go-Round

The convention of Senate wives is sometimes more revealing than the speeches of their husbands. Mrs. Eugene Millikin, wife of the witty and conservative Colorado Republican, recently confided: "I would prefer that Gene not come back this year. He is too loaded down with heavy jobs. If he would run in 1952 and return, Gene would lose his seniority and not be burdened with the committee chairmanship" . . . Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of the Florida Democrat, won the plaudits of the other wives for the sporting way she took her husband's tough primary defeat . . . Mrs. Chan Gurney is still so stunned by Senator Gurney's surprising loss in the South Dakota Republican primary, she won't talk about it to other wives
